CHAUTAUQUA HERE IN 1911

ALTHOUGH NUMBER OF TICKETS SOLD NOT SUFFICIENT, ASSEMBLY IS ASSURED.

1910 SESSIONS CLOSE

Floyd, the Magician, Lee-Lathrop-Fullenwider and Rev. Andrew Gillies Entertain Thousands Yesterday.

Ottumwa will have the Redpath-Vawter chautauqua in 1911. This was definitely decided last night at the closing session of the 1910 assembly.

The 1910 chautauqua has passed into history and it was one of the most successful assemblies held in Ottumwa. While many objections were made by business men because many of the best numbers were on the afternoon programs instead of the evening, the enterprise as a whole was excellent.

Rev. Andrew Gillies, the Lee-Lathrop-Fullenwider trio and Floyd the magician, were the closing numbers of the chautauqua. The Rev. Mr. Gillies was on the program during the afternoon, taking the place of Hon. Duncan E. McKinley, congressman from California, who had to cancel his engagement.

The Lee-Lathrop-Fullenwider trio opened the evening program with a concert recital and their numbers were heartily applauded.

Floyd the magician, proved to be the magnet of all eyes during his act, and he introduced many new tricks of magic which mystified the audience. The old saying that the hand is quicker than the eye was proven during his act, and while the audience closely followed him in his tricks they were unable to perceive how he could cause articles to disappear and then make them appear in some other place.

Gillies Pleasing Talker. Few, if any, were present in the large chautauqua audience yesterday afternoon who came away from the scene without a better knowledge of what constitutes the proper elements for the making of better Americans and a better America.

Reviews Progress. The lecturer reviewed the advances made during the century past in America and all of the more important scientific means of convenience were shown in contrast with the means afforded in the days of the founders of America as a republic.

Alien and Ballot. The matter of aliens in America was touched upon by the lecturer, who told of the tide of immigration and where it centered, of how the alien learned scarcely to read when the ballot was thrust into his hands and he was made an equal to all men.

Medical and Surgical Diseases of Women. Displacements, Ulceration and all diseases peculiar to women treated with uniform success. Surgical operation when necessary. Electro Thermal Baths for Rheumatism and Chronic Nervous Men. Men who suffer from Bladder and Kidney Troubles, Nervous Debility, Wasting Troubles, Varicocele, Stricture, should call and receive the best treatment offered for such private troubles.

Imports of Manufacturers' Materials Show Gain Under Payne Tariff Law

Washington, D. C., Aug. 10.—Manufacturers' materials imported since the enactment of the Payne tariff law have exceeded in quantity those of any corresponding period in the history of the country. Numerous calls upon the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor for information regarding imports, and especially those for the use of the manufacturers, have led the bureau to compile a table showing the imports of principal manufacturers' materials during the 11 months' operation of the Payne law for which figures are now available.

Table showing imports of manufacturers' materials from August 1, 1909, to June 30, 1910, compared with corresponding periods of 1909 and the former high record year, 1907.

then defined reputation and character. "Reputation is what you are during the day when the eyes of all are on you; character is what you are at night when alone."

"Reputation is what the people think; character is what God knows. Reputations are placed on tombstones, and you will find more lies in a graveyard than anywhere else."

"We have enough men who are good when they are watched, but we need men who are good when not watched."

Following the lecture by the Rev. Mr. Gillies, a trio of musical performers, the Lee-Lathrop-Fullenwider entertainers, held the audience under their sway for half an hour, while beautiful vocal and violin selections floated through the large assembly.

A generous applause rewarded their efforts, which were of a high character and varied in program. The female two-thirds of the trio furnish the vocal part of the entertainment, while P. H. Fullenwider displayed a mastery seldom found in drawing melody from the violin.

Miss Clara Sax and brother Carol Sax will entertain at a dancing party this evening at the Ottumwa Country Club in honor of Miss Sax's guests.

At the residence of the officiating clergyman Rev. J. W. Pool, 710 East

Second street, at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening the marriage of George Porter to Mrs. Mary N. Young took place. The couple will make their home for a time at the corner of Green and Main streets and leave in a short time for the west. Both young people have been residents of Ottumwa for sometime residing at 110 South Jefferson street.

THE EVENING STORY. ONE OF THE BROWNS. By Donald Allen. (Copyright 1910 by Associated Literary Press.)

At the breakfast table Grandma Singleton had said to her granddaughter, Miss Ethel Singleton, whom she had brought up from a child of eight to the age of nineteen:

"In about an hour I wish to have a talk with you on a certain matter, so please don't leave the house."

"Oh, you dear, good thing! I just felt that you had surprised me."

"And you felt right," was the grim reply.

Miss Ethel had the strongest suspicion of what was coming. She had choked up at the first words and could eat no more. She was simply giving her grandma taffy and pretending that she wasn't in the least frightened.

"Well, dearie, we will talk about Europe," said the young lady as she came floating in.

"And his name is Henry Brown," replied the dame in her deepest tones.

"Why-what-who?" "And you are engaged to be married?"

"Why, Grandma Singleton?" "I've found out all about it, Ethel, and you needn't carry the pretense any farther. Up there at Vassar you met a person named Henry Brown and fell in love with him. You are engaged. You have been intending to tell me about it for the last two weeks, but you couldn't get up the courage."

"But how did you find out?" asked Ethel, dropping all thoughts of defense.

"Same as Sherlock Holmes finds out things. I'm seventy-four years old, but I'm no back number. This meeting has been called to ask you what you have to say for yourself. You needn't take hold of my hand nor kiss me nor shed tears. I want to know who this Henry Brown is?"

"It's Henri Brown." "Oh!" "And he's a very, very nice young man, and his family is a very, very nice family. We are not exactly engaged, but almost. I was going to ask you about it."

"Well, you won't have to talk about it five minutes. You can never marry a Brown with my consent, and you can never marry any man with the tomfool name of Henri. You went to Vassar to be educated, not to fall in love with some sissy of a young fellow. Write to him today that the foolishness has passed.

"Oh, grandma, but we love each other!" wailed the girl. "It's only a half love."

"And his name is Brown—Henri Brown!" murmured Grandma. "But thousands of Browns have been great men, and the name of Henri, when you write it, looks distinguished. Mabe he'll change it, though, if you don't like it. Mabe he'll call himself Claude or something."

"Listen to me, Ethel. When I was a girl of your age, I had a beau named Brown. After winning my heart he vowed vengeance on the Browns forever after. If you marry a Brown you must leave this house, and you needn't expect a dollar of my money. That's flat."

"Grandma, it will kill me—it surely will!" were the words that came out between sobs, but they had no effect.

"Fall in love with a White, Black, Green, Smith or Perkins and I may not have anything to say against it," replied the old lady. "I was filled for a widow, and that widow had a broken nose at that."

Miss Ethel wept. She went into a decline. She thought of suicide. A month later grandma and her granddaughter were at a hotel in the Berkshire. So was Henri Brown. That is, he was at another hotel close by. Henri had been tipped off. Miss Ethel's decline still prevailed.

One hot afternoon, as the declining girl was asleep on a sofa and the grandmother sat in her chair dozing and thinking of that broken-nosed widow, a man stepped in off the veranda and held the muzzle of a pistol to her nose and demanded her cash and jewelry. He was bewhiskered and fierce. He meant murder if balked. Grandma looked at him for a few seconds and then tackled him. Notwithstanding the pistol and his threats she grabbed him by hair and whiskers and yelled for help. Miss Ethel awoke and yelled for the whole fire department.

In response, Henri Brown came dashing in. He dashed upon the intruder and dashed his head on the floor and against the wall and all over the room and he would have kept on dashing if the fellow hadn't escaped by the window he came in at, leaving knife and pistol on the floor.

Game old grandma was revived to be introduced to Mr. Henri Brown, who had just arrived to say that he would put an end to Brown and change the Henri to Samuel in order to win the hand of the charming granddaughter. The matter was taken under advisement for two days and then grandma reported:

"It was a put-up job on me, and Sherlock Holmes would say so, but if you two young folks are smart enough to carry such a thing through I guess mabe you'll make a success of marriage. Ethel, you get over that decline at once, and Brown, you think of some name not quite so sissy as Henri, and not quite so common as Samuel."

GREEK WOMAN IS DEPORTED

WATERLOO MAN'S WIFE SENT BACK HOME BECAUSE OF INFLAMED EYES.

Waterloo, Aug. 11.—Peter Mavrelis, the Greek confectioner and merchant at 226 Fourth street west, has returned from New York City, where he went with the confident and happy expectation of accompanying Mrs. Mavrelis and two children, a son and a daughter, just arrived from Greece, to Waterloo. The head of the family and the wife and two children were about to be united after a separation of eight years.

But Mrs. Mavrelis and the two children were stopped at Ellis Island, the government inspectors fearing that the mother was suffering from an affection of the eyes. News that his wife had been stopped and was in danger of being sent back to the old country took Mr. Mavrelis to New York. Everything possible was done to prevent deportation, influential citizens of Waterloo and those high among the Greeks of the country doing all in their power. But nevertheless Mrs. Mavrelis and her children, after spending a few hours with the husband and father, were compelled to start on the return journey to Athens, the port of embarkation.

Mrs. Mavrelis is a native of Sparta and only a few days before the sailing of the boat on which she came over her father died and this sad blow together with "breaking home ties" causes the brave little woman great grief and the greater part of the time of the passage she spent in weeping, causing her eyes to become swollen and inflamed.

Mrs. Mavrelis and her children before they started on the return trip were provided with return tickets and will again come to America on the same boat on which they have twice crossed the Atlantic ocean. They are expected to arrive again at New York in early September and it is hoped that no complications to their entrance will be encountered at that time. They will have crossed the ocean three times to gain the promised land and the anticipated happy home.

Mr. Mavrelis has been in Waterloo for the past six years, all that time engaged in the fruit and confectionery business. He is recognized as one of the leaders of the Greek colony in Waterloo and he has been able to secure title to a number of business and residence properties in the city.
