MILLER CHAPEL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

There was a good attendance at the Sunday afternoon service. A niece of Mrs. Hormel, Miss Ruth E. Beyer, secretary of the Home for the Friendless of Pittsburg, spoke on the subject, "The Pittsburg Social Survey Under the Auspices of the Sage Foundation Fund." She told of the conditions found in the factories of that city, the handicaps of the multitudes of the poor, and the corruption in political and public life. Miss Beyer spoke as an eye-witness of many of the conditions found. She was one of a large number of specialists employed under the Sage fund to investigate the social conditions of that busy manufacturing city. She was listened to with close attention and enthusiasm.

REUNION WAS A GRAND SUCCESS

PIONEERS AND OLD SOLDIERS MET IN ANNUAL OUTING YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

SPILMAN HONORED

Well Known Veteran Made President of the Soldiers' Association—Many Speeches Feature Gathering.

If it is true that one is only as old as he feels, then truly the huge gathering of members of the Old Settlers' and Soldiers' associations held yesterday in the grove at the end of Elm street, was but a happy recreation of well ordered youngsters. This, too, in the face of the fact that there were among those present some octogenarians and many were bent of frame, silvered of hair, halt of step. But all were immensely happy looking and sociability was contagious. One simply could not get away from it for the feeling, that each knew the other was borne in upon one and no one cared to throw it off. There was a plenty of speech-making, but it was not the tiring kind. Instead the talks made had all of them the ring of sincerity, while most of them recounted events in the lives of the tellers of the tales, which, if penned, would make the most interesting novels. The fifty-four band rendered concert music during the program. The election of the officers of the Old Soldiers' association closed the business of the day and resulted in the following choice for the ensuing year:

President—Major T. P. Spilman.
Secretary—A. E. McCue.
Treasurer—Major A. H. Hamilton.
Splendid Speaking.

Seldom is an audience greeted with more and better talks than those of yesterday. The speakers, while all dealing with the pioneers days or war times, managed each to have a speech sufficiently different from his neighbor's to make the talks immensely interesting and left the great crowd loath to see them end. The weather, aside from being slightly tinged with a chill, was ideal and the grove in which the annual outing was held was a fairland of rustic beauty that was pictured by many of the speakers as a back ground for their tales of the battle fields. Thousands of all ages, but chiefly of those starting on the way toward the sunset of life, were present at the huge meeting and all carried away a feeling of happiness for being once more in company with the men and women who blazed the trail and nurtured the wilds of the territory days into the present civilization. The boys who wore the blue in the dark days of the early sixties were heroes again in the eyes of young and old, and few young hearts in the vast crowd, but heart and thrilled for the glories that were the portion of the veterans. Their tales of the camp, the field, the hospital and the prison, filled all with a patriotic love and reverence for the Grand Army men, and justly too, did those who were bent with age and war time infirmities straighten up and became young again with the glow of pride in their years of sacrifice to the country's cause.

Old and Young Present.

In rows along the speaker's platform were a number of those who were to take part in the exercises of the day, and facing them sat the audience. Some of those in the rows of seats were but in their prime; these were largely the native sons and daughters who came with mother or father to have their elders once more register with the neighbors and fellows of the older days in the record book of the associations. The major portion of the seats were occupied with those on whom the snows of many winters left traces of silver, but failed to rob the countenances of the sunny glow of cheer and kindness.

Foster Pleases.

Among the earlier speakers was Thomas D. Foster, whose cheerful words brought many a smile to pioneers and whose praise of the people of every land who have sacrificed life and much that was dear for the nation's sake, included the old soldiers who were gathered around the grounds, who were qualified as an old settler Mr. Foster took a place in both organizations by his readiness to assist in making the function the grand success it was. He was followed by a pioneer well known in the county, George W. Dickens of Farson, who made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion.

Heindel a Feature.

A feature of the afternoon was the excellent speech of George Heindel, and was a blending of the young oratorical timber with the old, but the topic was that of the pioneer and the address went far to make it a feature among all the addresses of the day. The speaker went back to the infancy of mankind and the known world and reviewed the elements that have ever been factors in the make-up of the pioneer. The achievements of this class following their settlement in some until then unknown wild, were pictured by the speaker and the pioneer was brought down to the present time in a faithful and interesting word picture that fell upon attentive ears.

At the close of the address by Mr. Heindel, Capt. S. H. Harper, as president of the Old Soldiers' association, declared the latter part of the day's exercises open and requested the band to play the "Star Spangled Banner," which formally opened the reunion of the Old Soldiers' association.

Capt. Harper Heard.

In his address at the opening of the program, Capt. Harper reviewed much of the life of the soldier in the civil war and spoke of the many and great sacrifices endured by the young men of the early sixties. He recounted a visit to the Andersonville cemetery and told of some of the horrors of the Andersonville prison in a brief manner, but sufficiently lengthy to fill with horror anyone who would reflect on the sufferings endured by the union soldiery that were imprisoned there. Two prisoners of that fearful abode, S. J. Myers of Eddyville and J. M. Elder of Highland Center, were present. The latter told of 540 members of his regiment being imprisoned in the horrible stockade, and said that 220 of the men died there. Mr. Elder was a member of Co. H, 5th Iowa cavalry and his regiment was captured and surrendered August 2, 1864. Both of these men are pioneers and Mr. Myers has been a resident of Wapello county since 1843, and is one of the very oldest settlers of the county in point of residence, although but seventy years of age. He was a member of Co. C, 17th Iowa Infantry.

Jaques Tells Experience.

One of the most interesting talks of the day was that of Capt. W. H. C. Jaques, who recounted some of his personal experiences while with Fox's 400 in which more than 300 were killed and wounded. The speaker came to Iowa over sixty years ago with his father and family from Virginia and is one of the early Wapello county settlers. He was a member of the 19th Iowa Infantry having enlisted fresh from the farm in 1862. His description of the travel of the soldiers to St. Louis and from there to Raleigh, Mo., on box and flat cars, as well as the wearing out of shoes on the flint hills of Missouri, was humorous and again he aroused his hearers to keen interest in the tale of a battle in the peach orchards of the sister state. Peculiarly interesting was his story of personal experience in the battle where General Hearn and Blount met and worsted the southerner, Helmehan. Every officer in his regiment was killed, and out of forty-eight men of his company who entered one engagement, twenty-six were killed and wounded.

Mahon and Spilman Talk.

Captain Harper then introduced Major Samuel Mahon as a member of the regiment that was first over the breastworks, first in the hen house, first in the smoke house and first in the guard house. The speech that followed was listened to with deep interest and reviewed the advance of the country since the war. Major T. P. Spilman was the next speaker and his address was an appeal to the finer feelings of the nation toward its heroes. He told of some personal acquaintances who were blinded and blinded in the war of their undying patriotism and devotion to country. He dwelt with much feeling on the pathos that this patriotism evoked, and closed with an appeal to the comrades and the younger generation to lend the ear of solicitude and the hand of aid to those who have sacrificed that the country might be left intact.

Hamilton Gives Review.

No old soldier gathering would be complete without a talk by Major A. H. Hamilton, the senior of the "boys in blue" about Ottumwa, and one of the best known and widest loved of her citizens. The tale of his prison life in the pens of Texas and his terrible experience in escaping from them was the topic of his talk chiefly. No speeches were made during the day that compelled a greater interest in the hearing than did that of the aged warrior, and his story of the military prison and tramp in the wilderness of probably 700 miles before reaching the union lines. Some understanding may be had of this long travel of the starved and sick men, when it is known that after walking for two and a half days, picking up in the woods what ever presented itself as eatable, they found themselves but ten miles from their starting point. Few novels could stimulate the interest that did this tale of one of the many experiences of the war time, endured by the men who today wear the little bronze button that is prized as greater than the richest and costliest jewel.

The election of officers followed the speech of Major Hamilton. Through-out the program the fifty-four band rendered patriotic concert music.

Before the close of the old soldiers' program, Captain Harper read an address from Gen. Saint Kirkpatrick of Greensboro, N. C., which teemed with the humor that is characteristic of the veteran revenue service agent and was filled with amusement and good cheer to all present. Stories intermingled with pleasing mention of well known inhabitants of Wapello county, made up much of the letter.

Some Old Timers.

Among those present were some who have attained an age that inspires reverence and some of them have lived in the county more than half a century. Of these the oldest present was R. C. Edgar, who came to Iowa when it was a territory in 1839 and settled in Wapello county in 1843. He is at present a resident of Warren county but is visiting with a daughter, Mrs. Maria Allison, 723 Elm street. Mr. Edgar is in his eighty-eight year.

Oldest Native Son.

The person who lays claim to being the oldest native born settler in Wapello county is none other than George Kirtman who presides over the county court house as custodian. Mr. Kirtman says that he was born November 5, 1843 in a blacksmith shop in Dahlonga and that except for the period that he spent in the war, he has resided ever since in the county. George, as he is known most by the comrades, is staunch and patriotic member of Clontman Post, 139 of the 36th Iowa Infantry. His father, Elias Kirtman came to Dahlonga at mid night April 1, 1843 and George came November of the same year. No more patriotic soldier or settler was present at the reunion.

A War Prisoner.

John S. Foster of two miles north of Eddyville, who is seventy years old and a resident of the county since 1848, came with his good wife, Sarah I. Foster to the reunion. They attend all of the meetings of the pioneers unless something of very grave importance. Mrs. Foster has lived a few years longer in the county than her husbands and lays claim to sixty-five years residence. Mr. Foster was a union defender and as a member of the well known 38th Iowa, fought his way into the war prison at Ft. Tyler, Texas, and did not get out of the prison camp until the close of the war.

Another old timer present was John Murray, 118 Ponemah street, who with Mrs. Catherine Murray his wife, has attended about eight of the annual reunions. He is now seventy-two years of age and has lived in the county since 1868. Mrs. Murray preceded him in the county some eleven years, living here for fifty-five years.

One cannot overlook Philip Stuber when looking up the pioneers. This resident of Columbia township came to the county in 1846 and is sixty-six years of age. He was a member of the 38th Iowa and lives in Eddyville.

George Dickens of Farson who was one of the speakers on the old settler's program, justly claims the right to talk on such occasions from the fact that sixty-three years' residence makes him the longest lived settler. Mr. Dickens is sixty-seven years of age, and a regular attendant at the reunions.

And still another claims the year of '43 as his own in the county. This is M. V. Leonard, 316 Carlisle street. He is seventy years of age and was a member of Co. D, 15th Iowa Infantry.

Among the patriarchs of our county John Parks, who has passed the seventy-eighth milestone of life and is one of the best known men in Kirksville and a resident of the county since 1838.

A Slave Soldier.

Nor were all of the old settlers and old soldiers white men. In fact one of those whose history has the tinge of romance and is a record and incident by anyone as a servant of his nation, is Charles Owens whose boyhood was spent as a slave in Missouri to one John D. Bowen. He was born a slave on the plantation of John D. Bowen, 1834 and his seventy-six years are worn as lightly as most men wear fifty. Charley, as he is known to his friends, was one of the slaves who ran away from the plantation of his master and joined the union forces at Burlington. He served under Col. Fitz Henry too from 1861 to 1864. He is an old settler too, and has lived on his five-acre tract of fruit land since October 13, 1854. The growth of the city of Ottumwa is demonstrated in the life of Mr. Owens whose place was once considered out in the country, but now is on Caldwell street and is an old settler's meeting.

A veteran of the civil war and an old settler as well are claims of Laurence Glenn, 1017 Plum street, and incidentally it might be remarked that the Glenn home is still situated in what was known at its building forty years ago as Blake's addition. Mr. Glenn came to the county in 1857 and except for his period in the war as a member of Co. C, 38th Missouri Infantry, he has resided here since.

Among the Dahlongans who were residents of old soldiers and settlers are Squire A. Fuqua, who has lived in the county since 1865 and is 78 years old. John Harness of Happy Hollow is another who can justly lay claim to the title of settler and soldier. He has lived in the county for 57 years and wounds received by him in the knee, hip and left side during the war, which have crippled him for life, make him the oldest of an old soldier. Mr. Harness served as a member of Co. E, 36th Iowa Infantry and is seventy years old.

Adam Schwarm who was present yesterday and is now in seventy-eight years is another pioneer. Mr. Schwarm came to the city in 1857 after two years' residence at Burlington. His wife has resided here since 1845.

Always in hand with the old soldiers have anything on and one of the sturdiest of the workers, is T. J. Hall, generally known among the "boys in blue" as Jack Hall. He has made his home in Ottumwa since 1868 and was a member of Co. H, 11th Ohio, in which he saw three years' service and was in twenty-two battles, among them being the Stone River. Jack never misses an old soldier's meeting.

Major T. P. Spilman shares with Mr. Hall in the number of years residence in Wapello county. The Major was born in Greensburg, Ind., and served in Co. B, 52nd Indiana and later was made captain of Co. A, 14th Indiana in which regiment he rose to the position of major.

Daum Made President.
