Stenographer Gets His Name on the Hero Roll by Grappling With Assailant

Chicago, Oct. 15.—The hero of the attempted assassination of Col. Roosevelt is Elbert E. Martin, the colonel's stenographer, who prevented Schrank, it is believed from firing a second shot, for which his finger was straining at the trigger when Martin overpowered him.

Through the present tour Martin has been always at the colonel's elbow pushing intruding persons away. More than once Col. Roosevelt has reproved him for being "too rough" in Saginaw, Mich. "Martin threw himself against a man who was pushing forward and bumped him into a gutter. For this he was rebuked by Col. Roosevelt" but Martin today said he believed the Saginaw man and Schrank were the same.

Last night in Milwaukee as elsewhere, Martin was at the colonel's elbow. Henry F. Cochems was on the other side.

"You get into the car first," said Cochems to Martin, as it was customary for the colonel to take the middle seat.

"After you," replied Martin. The politeness gave him the opportunity to engrave his name on the roll of fame for Cochems was out of reach when the shot was fired and Martin was right at hand.

Schrank was within seven feet of the colonel when he leveled his gun at the ex-president's breast. He fired once but an instant later Martin leaped on him and hurled him to the ground.

He twisted a sturdy arm around the assassin's neck in a half nelson lock and with his free hand grasped the revolver around the hammer so that the trigger could not be pulled a second time.

Cochems then sprang upon Schrank and the would be assassin was helpless. Cochems and a special policeman wrenched the gun away from Schrank. Then the crowd surged forward, some of the spectators, it was feared, were bent on having the man's life, but Martin and Cochems dragged him to safety under Col. Roosevelt's protection.

"Don't hurt the man. Don't let any one hurt him," insisted the colonel and his plea was respected.

Martin is 29 years old and a native of Manchester, Vt. He joined the Roosevelt staff last August by simply walking into progressive headquarters in New York and asking for a job. He was given it and soon after was made the colonel's personal stenographer, Col. Roosevelt likes strong men around him.

"That young man looks as if he had the punch," he said of Martin. Martin was married this summer. He is not only an expert stenographer but a lawyer having graduated in the class of 1912 from the Detroit college. He was admitted to the bar in Lansing, Mich. He played football for Rhineland, Wis., high school and with the team of the Big Rapids, Mich., business college where he learned shorthand.

Martin went to Big Rapids with $10 in currency as his sole fortune and worked his way through by selling books. "What I would like to do is spend all my life working for the colonel," is his creed, expressed two days ago to Cochems.

Colonel Shot Down as He Stepped Into Automobile to Go to Milwaukee Coliseum to Make a Speech.

MADMAN BLAMES M'KINLEY'S SPIRIT

John Schrank, Would-be Assassin; Says He Was Moved to Attempt Crime by Visions.

Milwaukee, Oct. 15.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot in the breast here last night by a madman who told the police after an hour's examination that he was John Schrank of 370 East Tenth street, New York.

With a 32-caliber bullet in his body Colonel Roosevelt went to the auditorium and delivered his scheduled speech. Three physicians who made a superficial examination of the wound when he reached the auditorium agreed he was in no immediate grave danger.

At the conclusion of his address the colonel was taken to the Emergency hospital where six physicians examined his wound. They found it impossible to determine the depth to which the bullet had penetrated, and it was decided to take an X-ray photograph.

Live Saved by Aids. Colonel Roosevelt's life probably was saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered last night. The bullet struck the manuscript, which retarded its force as it passed through into the chest.

The would-be assassin was prevented from firing a second shot by Albert H. Martin, one of Colonel Roosevelt's two secretaries. Colonel Roosevelt had just stepped into an automobile when the assassin pushed his way through the crowd in the street and fired. Martin, who was standing in the car with the colonel, leaped onto the man's shoulders and bore him to the ground.

Captain A. O. Girard of Milwaukee, who was on the front seat, jumped almost at the same time, and in an instant the man was overpowered and disarmed.

A wild cry of "Lynch him" went up from the crowd. Col. Roosevelt spoke to the people and told them to spare his assailant. The man was taken into the hotel and held there until he was removed to the police station.

The colonel felt no pain at the time the shot was fired and was not aware he was shot until he was on the way to the auditorium. His attention was then called to a hole in his overcoat and he found that his shirt was soaked with blood. He insisted that he was not hurt badly.

In spite of the entreaties of physicians Col. Roosevelt insisted upon delivering his address.

Harry F. Cochems, one of the Wisconsin progressive leaders, told the great crowd which had assembled in the auditorium that Col. Roosevelt had been shot and asked the people to be calm. The crowd was thrown almost into a panic by the announcement but Colonel Roosevelt calmed the people by rising and assuring them that he was not badly hurt.

Then he began his address. Several times he seemed to be growing weak, and members of his party rose to help him. He motioned them to sit down.

Let me alone, I'm all right," he said, and he concluded his speech.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 15.—John W. Schrank, would be assassin of Col. Roosevelt was taken to district court at 10:30 this morning for preliminary examination. This action was taken on recommendation of District Attorney Zabel, who issued a warrant charging Schrank with shooting Col. Roosevelt, with intent to kill.

Judge Neelan of the district court, immediately after the arraignment of Schrank, ordered Dr. Somer, head of the chemical department of Marquette university, to make a chemical test of bullets remaining in the would be slayer's revolver.

Judge Neelan announced that this action was taken to determine immediately if the 38 caliber bullet which entered Col. Roosevelt's body had been poisoned.

Schrank, Col. Roosevelt's assailant, pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted murder when given a preliminary arraignment before Judge Neelan, in the district court today.

"I will fix ball at $7,500, the maximum under the charge upon which the prisoner has been arraigned," said Judge Neelan. Schrank was immediately returned to the police station.

The judge said he was prompted by memories of the bullet which killed President McKinley and also by a personal desire to give the surgeons at Chicago every possible aid in treating Col. Roosevelt's wound.

Said McKinley's Vision Prompted Act Schrank insisted again today that a vision in which former President McKinley appeared to him caused him to shoot the colonel.

Followed Over Country. A long proclamation of the people found in Schrank's pockets declared that the attack was made by prearrangement and that the assassin meant to end his own life after disposing of the colonel. Scraps of hotel memoranda dates and the like on the back of an envelope showed that the man had apparently been following the colonel all about the country, waiting for a favorable time to attack the progressive leader.

Copy of Itinerary. He appeared unperturbed over the description of the colonel's itinerary written on the back of a sheet of note paper taken from the Bismarck hotel and cafe, Nashville, Tenn.

He confessed to the police that he fired the shot, and added: "Any man looking for a third term ought to be shot."

A written proclamation found in the clothing of the prisoner reads: Sept. 15, 1912.—Sept. 15, 1901, 1:30 a. m.—In a dream I saw President McKinley sit up in a monk's attire, in whom I recognized Theodore Roosevelt. The dead president said, "This is my murderer, avenge my death."

Sept. 12, 1912, 1:30 a. m.—While writing a poem some one tapped me on the shoulder and said: "Let not a murderer take the presidential chair. Avenge my death." I could plainly see Mr. McKinley's features. Before the Almighty God, I swear this above writing is nothing but the truth.

The police believe however, that Schrank is afflicted with some mental disorder. Whatever his state of mind, it was apparent to all who saw him that John Schrank was thoroughly in earnest and that he felt that it was a matter of high duty for him to kill Theodore Roosevelt.

Another note found in the man's pocket reads: So long as Japan could rise to the greatest power of the world, despite her surviving a tradition more than 2,000 years old, as General Nogi so nobly demonstrated, it is the duty of the United States of America to uphold the third term tradition. Let every third term be regarded as a traitor to the American cause. Let it be the right and duty of every citizen to forcibly remove a third term. Never let a third term party emblem appear on the official ballot. I am willing to die for my country. God has called me to be his instrument, so help me God.

Innocent Guilty. In German a strong tower is our God.

Schrank looked little the worse for a night spent in a cell at the central station.

"How do you feel?" Schrank was asked.

"Oh, pretty well, considering everything," he answered.

He appeared untroubled over the probable consequences of the shooting, usually voted the democratic ticket but that some times he voted as a republican.

Prisoner Curious Study. It was learned from Schrank that his sweetheart, whom he called Emily Zeigler, lost her life in the destruction by fire of the steamship General Slocum in New York several years ago. He never married he says.

Schrank is a curious study. His hands are small and nervous, and smooth as though unused to toil. He talks fluently at times, using excellent English but often stopped abruptly and refused to say another word, until his changing mood made him talkative once more. His appearance is that of an intelligent man, and his large clear eyes, which he held steadily upon his inquisitors, did not seem like those of most men who are insane.
