

Carnegie Said:

Andrew Carnegie once said that the cheapest commodity a community could purchase was a millionaire. He worked hard, he gave of his time, his ability, his money, his credit and his reputation to build up a community and to keep people employed, and all he got out of it was his board and clothes.

COLONEL PALMER ENJOYING G. A. R. WEDDING AT THE BALL HOME

WASHINGTON MAN HAS VISITED MANY CITIES IN SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST.

Des Moines, March 31.—Col. David J. Palmer, commander in chief of the G. A. R., is hard at work but having the most enjoyable time of an eventful life. He has just returned from the second of his official trips visiting the grand army departments of the country.

"That which has impressed me most," said the colonel, "is the cordiality and good feeling on the part of the surviving Johnnies of the south. At Dallas they had a fine banquet of our department and there was, by invitation, quite a number of the members of the Confederate Veterans' association, and several on the speaking program. I spoke second and wound up with congratulations on the fact that whatever might have been the past there is now one country, one flag, one people, and we stand united for a greater America. A fine old judge who had seen service in the Confederate army followed me and he started off with an emphatic and heartfelt endorsement of everything that I had said. So it was everywhere."

"I had to take a hearty laugh with an ex-Confederate at Little Rock. He told me how that as a boy he had been taught one southern soldier was as good as three northern, and he went into the war with that notion firmly fixed in his mind. 'But I tell you,' he said, 'before I got through I found one was all I wanted to take care of, and I was perfectly willing that if he'd let me alone, I'd let him alone. We had a great meeting at Little Rock.'"

The colonel started out northwest and then came by a more southerly route. He visited and spoke in Denver, Salt Lake City, Boise, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Albuquerque, San Antonio, Dallas and Little Rock. At and about Los Angeles he spent nearly a week and it was a continuous round of camp fires and banquets. Next week he will go east again and start with the department encampment in Rhode Island, will visit Massachusetts and the other New England states.

Iowa City, March 31.—William Straud, a pioneer of Johnson county, was fatally injured in the woods on the farm of Will Chihak, near Swisher, when a tree, felled by his two young sons, fell in the wrong direction and pinned the aged father to the ground. His skull was found to be fractured, his jawbone broken and internal injuries inflicted. When other wood choppers rushed to his side and freed him he was unconscious and bleeding from the mouth, nose and ears. He was taken to a hospital in Cedar Rapids and died there seven hours later after regaining consciousness in part for a short period.

FIGHT IS BETWEEN PEOPLE AND COMPANY

Mason City, March 31.—The city election here was more of a fight between the corporations and the people than a fight among candidates for office under the commission form of government. Two years ago the People's Gas & Electric Co., fought out the franchise and rate question with the present city government and were whipped. Now Potter, vice president of the Western Electric Co., made the race for mayor against the present incumbent.
