FOREIGN MONEY FALLS IN SWEDEN

After a considerable spell of comparative inactivity, those persons in the United States who were taking a part in the engineering of the revolution became weary of waiting for developments and sent a man to see Casement. This man, an Irishman and a British subject living in America, proceeded direct to Germany without touching England. He brought word that a definite date for the uprising must be set. This was agreed to and either Easter Sunday or Easter Monday was fixed upon.

As the time drew near it was seen that a revolution could not be made a success and the idea of an invasion was virtually discarded. This fact was not known to the Sinn Feiners until almost the moment before the fighting started. However, certain Berlin officials had given their word to assist the movement and decided to satisfy the obligation as far as possible without heavy loss of life or material.

Easter approached and it was proposed to dispatch a ship to Ireland with arms. A naval attack on the east coast of England and air raids also were settled upon to divert the attention of the British authorities from Ireland. The ship, with some 20,000 arms, did start, from Kiel for Tralee, on the western coast of Ireland. When Sir Roger found that the plan for an invasion of England had fallen through he refused to let his followers embark, declaring that it would be sheer murder. He did agree to go himself, however, and departed on the submarine. Sir Roger and his associates fell into the hands of the British at Tralee and the ship was sunk. The naval and air raids on the British coast were carried out but the Sinn Feiners found themselves espousing a hopeless cause.

TO EXPLAIN EXECUTIONS. London, May 22.—A statement giving full particulars of the acts for which fifteen participants in the Irish rebellion had been executed was being prepared and would be presented shortly. Premier Asquith told a questioner in the house of commons today. The premier added that he was anxious, because of misunderstanding in America on this subject, that the statement should be presented at the earliest possible moment.

COURT SAYS MAN CANNOT DESERT Des Moines, May 22.—After a man has lived with a woman for thirteen years without marrying her and has introduced her as his wife he cannot desert her and wed another without becoming a bigamist. During the preceding thirteen years he had lived with Bessie Noland. The waitress, after learning the true facts, brought action in district court to have her marriage to Deveraux annulled.
