In order to keep "booze" in this territory it is apparently necessary to hide your safe.

We were always under the impression that safe blowing and liquor selling were two different and distinct lines of business.

The quality of the soil, seed and weather in Northern Minnesota for 1915 is par excellence and in the hands of our 100 per cent quality farmers a bumper crop is assured.

Bemidji's coming Fourth of July celebration, which is to be a safe and sane affair, promises to be the most popular event in North Central Minnesota. Plans in every section are being made by townspeople and farmers' club to join the citizens of this city in the celebration of this national holiday.

All hail the Farmers' picnic. The tillers of the soil and their families will lay a spread before the hungry townspeople and their families at noon on Thursday, June 17. To our knowledge this is the first time in the history of any community that such a treat has been offered any city. Bemidji business men have shown their appreciation of this by ordering their places of business closed from 11:00 a. m. until 3:00 p. m. After the picnic festivities the farmers, many of them, will want to do some shopping and for this reason the stores will be re-opened.

EDITORIAL EXPLOSIONS * It takes a philosopher to be bigger than the little troubles that best us, but, after all, happiness comes from within, and he is wise who fortifies himself against external conditions by a cheerful spirit.—Rush City Post.

The liking for liquor is not a natural one, but an acquired taste and with the temptation taken away from the younger set, so that there is none to take the place of the old soak as he passes on, the traffic will gradually die out. If prohibition would not lessen the consumption, why are these fellows making such a howl to retain the saloon? It is more to the point to say that prohibition would have a tendency to greatly reduce the income in certain quarters and anything that hits their pockets is to be condemned.—Campbell Progress.

If you don't believe there is a whole lot of grief in running a country newspaper, just try it. But it's not all grief. Now there's the exchange table. Why, it's just like sitting down to a $5 meal at the Waldorf-Astoria (taking a long chance at a guess what they serve $5 meals there). Of course you occasionally strike something in the exchange menu that's not agreeable to the taste, just as you sometimes strike a pithy remark at the table of the best regulated families. But on the whole there's nothing pleasanter to the average editor than to read the editorials and witticisms and news articles and—don't forget them—the advertisements in the other newspapers that come to his desk from all over the state.—Luverne Journal.

ENGLAND'S COAST VISITED BY SPIES OF GERMAN GOVERNMENT London, May 25.—(By mail to New York.)—England's newest war mystery is the "will-o'-the-wisp" off the British east coast. Cleverest sleuths of the nation are today searching for a mysterious grey motor car "D-4832"—that nightly races along peaceful East Anglia highways intermittently piercing the upper darkness with flashes of light that tell military secrets to enemy submarines hovering off the coast.

The mystery rivals the most thrilling of war time dramas with the climax yet to come. Occupants of peaceful farmhouses and villagers of the quaint old English seacoast towns are waiting for the government to solve the mystery that is the talk of the countryside.

Nightly they have seen the powerful car dash madly past, a huddled figure bent low over the wheel. Some say he wears the uniform of a British military officer while others are not so sure. All of them have seen the piercing rays of the motor's searchlights perform strange arcs on the sky. A dozen times they have spread the alarm by "phone in the direction the mysterious visitor was traveling but as many times he has eluded them.

It is only at night that the "phantom" thunders along the East Coast roads. At daybreak he disappears seemingly into air until another night. On the night of the last Zeppelin raid over Suffolk and Essex the "phantom" was out. Carrying a blinding white light, the villagers say, he dashed over hill and dale, plainly plotting the Zeppelin over its course. A hundred persons swear to this. One caught the number of the grey mystery—"D-4832" but no car with that number is registered.

Guards are now posted along all the principal East Coast roads. Here the "phantom" has ceased his nightly visit. But off in the distance, on other roads, these guards have seen the streaks of light that pierce the sky and have heard the faint distant rumble of the racing motor.

The country folk say it is uncanny and the government sleuths are beginning to think so too.

Belief, however, that German spies are actually at work on the East Coast is strengthened by an incident near the seacoast at Sheeringham. This time it was not the mysterious auto but two men intercepted by boy scouts in the act of signalling from a cliff with a lantern. Menaced by a revolver in the hand of one of the men all but one of the scouts withdrew. The one that remained firm was later found gagged with his own handkerchief and unconscious near the scene of the incident. Revived, the scout suffered hysteria but described the men, declaring they spoke in a foreign tongue.

Residents of the cliff coasts of Essex have reported that almost nightly signals have been observed at more isolated points. Reported attempts to surprise the signalers have failed.

VALUABLE TOWN BEAUFY. The architectural embellishment of a city is widely recognized as a task for artists, but the architecture of the city itself has too long been left to chance and the politician. We now are beginning to see that upon the fundamental rightness of this architecture depend not only the health and comfort of the public, but its pleasure in its surroundings and its municipal pride.—New York Times.

CITY PLANNING LEGISLATION

New Jersey's New Law an Aid to Growing Municipalities.

Effective work by commercial organizations resulted in the enactment of a new law by the New Jersey legislature last April. There has been on the statute books of New Jersey since 1912 a law giving to the first and second class cities the power to appoint municipal planning and art commissions.

Realizing the need for such legislation for their own community, the directors of the board of public improvement of Madison, N. J., suggested to the New Jersey state chamber of commerce the desirability of co-operating in the advocacy of a law of this kind. As a result the state chamber of commerce appointed a committee which drafted what was subsequently known as assembly bill No. 691.

"In recognition of the need so frequently apparent of more careful advance planning of future municipal improvements, such as streets, parks, public buildings, etc., and of the location and design of public buildings and public works of art, the New Jersey state chamber of commerce heartily indorses the foregoing bill and speaks for it in the favorable action of the legislature at the present session.

"This bill gives all municipalities except first and second class cities (for which similar provision has been made by laws of 1913, chapters 72 and 170) the power to appoint municipal plan and art commissions, the members of which are to serve without pay. Such commissions are to act in an advisory capacity to the local municipal governments and are to have no power to incur indebtedness except such as shall have been provided for and covered by appropriations previously made by the local municipal governments."

The new law was signed by Governor Fielder April 6. It is believed that it will be of material aid to the many small and growing municipalities in New Jersey in controlling more effectively than heretofore their future growth and development along rational lines.
