June is the month not only of roses and weddings, but it is the month that celebrates a far less frequently sung fete. Father's Day comes this month on June 22. The rose, any color, is the emblem of Father's Day.

All who wear one on June 22, will be known to pay tribute to father, living or dead. Father, himself, was not the inventor of this celebration. It was a woman who devotedly admired her father and husband who made the suggestion. Happy and admiring wives and daughters all over the country have taken it up.

There is a slow but sure gathering feeling among women that in spite of the heavy artillery used against men in the fight for suffrage, after all, Father is a pretty fine old fellow, and that we will tell him so once a year, no matter how we ignore and maltreat him the remaining three hundred and sixty-four days.

lic is evidenced by the number now being revised. Although our knowledge of wind action is limited, we should be able to come nearer to a common ground of requirement for wind bracing than we have at present. As a basis for uniformity the writer suggests the building ordinances of Chicago. The paragraph on wind resistance reads:

"All buildings shall be designed to resist a horizontal wind pressure of twenty pounds per square foot for every square foot of exposed surface. In no case shall the overturning moment due to wind pressure exceed 75 per cent of the moment of stability of the building due to the dead load only."

"The paragraph relating to wind stress reads:

"For stress produced by wind forces, combined with those from live and dead loads, the unit stress may be increased 50 per cent over those given above, but the section shall not be less than required if wind forces be neglected."

FENCES IN MICHIGAN.

Stumps That Are Relics of the Lively Old Lumbering Days.
 An easterner visiting Michigan is attracted by the stump fences more than by almost anything else, a writer in American Forestry remarks.

Aside from these stump fences, the farms, the uplands and the marshes are not much different from those of New England. One misses the characteristic stone walls of New England, but finds in their place the most novel fences in the world—those made of stumps that have in recent years been gulled out of the ground by powerful machines constructed for that purpose.

The force required to pull such stumps from the ground is enormous, but it is applied slowly, in submission to the decree of nature that what is gained in power must be lost in speed.

These stumps are relics of the ill-fated lumbering ever seen in the United States. It ended about thirty years ago in Big Rapids, Grand Rapids and their vicinity. Old timers entertain the visitor by the hour with reminiscences of the amazing number of logs that were cut in that region.

Logging somewhat similar, but not nearly so extensive, still continues in the northern part of Michigan, but does not equal in extent nor in picturesque quality that which formerly took place on the famous Muskegon river.

The story is told how a certain "Sister Susie" in London knitted socks for soldiers at the front. In the toe of one she placed a note and the first soldier that read it was her brother.
