BUY RED CROSS SEALS.

1915

When we realize that one person out of every four in America who dies between the ages of fifteen and fifty dies from tuberculosis, and that it is mainly through voluntary subscriptions that the fight against the disease is initiated, we realize what the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals means to Minnesota.

The economic loss to this state annually from tuberculosis is ten million dollars, which means that every one of us loses five dollars personally. Practically all of the 2,500 annual deaths from tuberculosis are preventable if taken in time and properly treated. When you buy a Red Cross Christmas Seal you help Minnesota to "take them in time" and to eliminate the needless suffering and needless loss occasioned by the white plague in this state. Tuberculosis leaves more destitute widows and orphans than any other disease—Red Cross Seals save families from misery.

If Minnesota raises the fund which it should, it will mean that poverty will not prevent the proper treatment of tuberculosis victims. Adequate funds will make possible the free services of physicians for diagnosis and treatment, the care of a visiting nurse, and the provision of proper diet and open air living for the patient and protective care for the families of the poor.

Of course we want Bemidji to rank among the first in per capita seal sales this year. The way to do this is not to talk about it, but to buy seals. Let us put them on our calling cards, on our private and business correspondence, bills, packages and everything that will hold them from now until the end of the year. If each of us purchased one hundred seals, think of what our community and the state could do in ridding itself of disease next year.

With several monologue selections, Adrian Newens last night entertained a good audience at the Methodist church, as the second number of the Woman's Study club Lyceum course, in a highly enjoyable manner. Mr. Newens is a real humorist and kept his audience in constant good nature. His impersonations of the characters in the stories were so good that one could easily imagine the principals actually present on the platform. The audience left no doubt of its appreciation.

In a superbly staged five-part Famous Players subject, "The Morals of Marcus" at the Grand theater tonight. Marie Doro is markedly successful in the part of Charlotte, a girl who, by her widowed mother is taken into the household of an old Turk and at the age of eighteen years, learns of the plans of her foster father to sell her to a still older Turk. She is aided in escaping to England, but her good friend is arrested on his arrival and she is thrown into the home of a medium young philosopher. Charlotte's rearing, apparently, has been noted chiefly for what it has not taught her. Her disregard for convention forms one of the interesting phases of the story. It is the contact of child-like innocence with adult Puritanism. "The Morals of Marcus" is filled with delicate bits. There are times when one is moved to mirth, there are occasions when one feels the tug of heart-strings, and Miss Doro makes herself felt right at the start of the picture and her grasp is firm throughout. M. Bush is spending the week at Sioux City, Ia., on business.

A Fine Tasting Turkey For Thanksgiving

You want your friends and relatives who gather 'round your table Thanksgiving Day to find every mouthful of your Turkey to be flavory. You want your turkey to be fresh and well fed.

And that's the kind of a turkey you'll get if you choose it here. Our turkeys are not the cold storage kind that you find in many butcher shops. They're fresh killed. Our turkeys come in all weights--for large or small families.

Perhaps you prefer a nice juicy roast for Thanksgiving--or a chicken or a goose or a duck. We can fill any meat or poultry order you give us.
