was more BANGS and BIFFS and ultimately a semblance of order was obtained and the Republican Convention of 1916 was in session.

Over in the Auditorium, very much the same scenes were being enacted, on a slightly smaller scale. The Auditorium was likewise packed, but it wasn't nearly so large a hall as the Coliseum and its theatre-like proportions didn't create the impression of vastness such as struck the onlooker on entering the barn-like interior of the Republican meeting place.

The Progressive conclave was more mixed, also. There were women delegates. But there was the same noise and chatter and enthusiasm.

The fiery red head of National Chairman Victor Murdock moved comet-like on the stage.

"Original Roosevelt men"—and women—renewed their fealty to the Sage of Sagamore Hill in cheers, in imprompt conferences, in all sorts of badges and ribbons.

bers of the Chicago Teachers' Federation.

The "Rovers," garbed in specially tailored suits, formed one of the noisiest groups in line. They are movable adjutants of the parade.

Chief of Police Charles C. Healey and a mounted squad headed the parade.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, grand marshal, dressed in a costume of white and yellow, followed, leading the ranks of women marching sixteen abreast.

Members of the National Board of the American Women Suffrage association were led by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, New York, president of the organization.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull House was unable to walk, and rode in an automobile.

"CONVENTIONALITIES"

Former heavyweight champion, James J. Corbett, is here looking them over. He was at the ringside when the gong sounded today.

Former Secretary of the Interior Carmi Thompson is here from St. Paul to help the Burton political boom.

After one of Senator Weeks' runners up had spent 24 hours, his most winning manner and a breakfast invitation on two delegates under the misapprehension they were old guardsmen, only to discover they were red hot rantankerous Roosevelt Progressives, the senator was enough of a sport to buy them coffee and rolls anyhow.

William Jennings Bryan is to be an onlooker this week. He's under contract to write about the convention. The less peaceful the convention is the more he will have to write about.

Secretary George L. von Meyer of the Republican-Roosevelt committee rises up in a half page ad today to advise in 72-point type that the delegates "heal the wound to the bone."

DULUTH DIOCESE IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Duluth, Minn., June 7.—Forty members of the Episcopal clergy and a like number of laymen represented the parishes and missions of the Duluth diocese at the 21st annual convention which opened last night. Bishop J. D. Morrison presided at the deliberations. The meetings will continue through Thursday.

ANNOUNCEMENT. At the request of my neighbors and the farmers' clubs of this district, I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the nomination as County Commissioner for the 6th District of Beltrami County to be voted for at the primary election, June 19, 1916.

I am not a real estate dealer or a government locator or have I ever been removed from any public office, and being a farmer I feel that I am qualified to look after the farmer and laborers' interest. Your vote for me at the primaries will be appreciated.

WOMEN THERE TOO

Chicago, June 7.—As an ocular demonstration of the strength of the Votes For Women movement, thousands of suffragists paraded downtown Chicago today.

They are demanding that the Republican platform contain a plank favoring enfranchisement of women and during the convention sessions will execute a carefully planned campaign of missionary work among the delegates. The campaign began today with a monster parade of the women, led by Mrs. Harrison Monro Brown, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association. Eight thousand women are expected to march.

gallery tooted cheerfully away at the popular airs of the day and kept the waiting thousands in good humor.

On the floor, where standards bearing the names of the states marked off the space reserved for the actual participants in this quadriennial festivity, the delegates were slower to arrive.

There was a constant roar of noise from the floor and the galleries, the buzzing of thousands of voices blended into one indescribable medley. This bedlam of confusion and talk and stamping of feet and whispering and shouting rolled up to the speaker's platform like a giant wave. The voice of eight thousand sets of vocal chords must be heard to be understood; words can't convey the impression.

The delegates, all alive to their own importance and wearing vivid badges proclaiming their right to have a voice in selecting the Republican standard bearers, strolled in in groups and squads and companies. They clustered about in little knots, buzzing away with the ever-unchanging gossip of a national meeting.

Hold Conference
On the speaker's platform the officers of the convention were holding the little conferences that really amounted to something. Then came Charles D. Hillis. There was a vociferous outburst, a sort of tidal wave of noise that dashed against the platform and finally subsided in what would have been merely the murmur of expectation, if it hadn't been for the fact that eight or ten thousand murmurs of expectation from the audience bended together, made a fairly creditable amount of noise.

Finally, BANG! went the gavel. (Gavel by courtesy, he it understood, since it was really a gigantic mallet, the only kind whose staccato raps could be executed to penetrate the convention noise).

Chairman Hillis called the convention to order.

The noise subsided a little. There

MR. HUGHES THEN AND MR. HUGHES NOW

Chicago, June 7.—History undoubtedly repeats itself. On June 10, 1912, a few days before the Republican National Convention, Justice Chas. E. Hughes, on learning that his name was being agitated as a possible "compromise" candidate in the fight between Taft and Roosevelt, sent the following message to a political leader in New York, by a friend:

"Justice Hughes for the nomination is strictly without his authority. It is against his express wish." During the fast-year Justice Hughes has made almost identical disclaimers.
