There is a shortage of bathing suits in St. Paul in every way.

There are 126,500 automobiles, or one for every 19 persons, in the state of Minnesota, according to a report made by Julius A. Schmah, secretary of state.

The year of August 15, 1915, to August 15, 1916, has been the greatest crop year in the history of the Northwest. The wheat, oats, barley and rye crops were the largest in the history of the Northwest; the value of the crop was the largest in history and the shipments of flour smashed all records.

VOCATIONAL COURSES. Uncle Sam will put a vocational course of training in every high school in the country if a bill that has just passed the senate also passes the house of representative, according to a report from Washington.

The bill was introduced simultaneously in both houses by Senator Hoke Smith and Representative Hughes, both of Georgia. It is an elaboration of the federal aid system by which the United States government annually contributes $100,000 to each state for the maintenance of agricultural colleges and experiment stations, as well as four million, one hundred thousand dollars to carry on the rural extension system of vocational instruction for farmers throughout the country.

The proposed law is the result of a steadily growing conviction that the prospective farmer, or, nowadays, scientific agriculturist, should be extended the opportunities of an agricultural schooling at an early age and not be compelled to attend the agricultural college for the rudiments of his trade.

It has been felt that a large proportion of boys destined to make their living from the soil are unable to afford a college education and need high school credits for college entrance anyhow.

Fifteen states now extend aid to their high schools for courses in agricultural, the mechanic arts and home economics. Minnesota annually appropriates $300,000 for this work.

To standardize and nationalize the high school aid work the Smith-Hughes bill provides that the United States shall share in the payment of salaries to state teachers, inspectors and directors in state high schools. It also provides for a Federal Board of Vocational Education.

This board, which would consist of the commissioner of education of the United States as chairman and four members to be appointed, (not more than two from any political party), by the president. This board and state educational authorities would co-operate in outlining courses.

The states relations' service of the Department of Agriculture has pursued the system still further by preparing a comprehensive system of courses in agriculture. These have been offered to the states for use in their grammar schools, in the rural districts.

Alabama, Mississippi, Wisconsin, Maryland and Vermont have installed the course in all their elementary schools since the initiation of the plan a year or so ago.

A GOOD VETO. President Wilson has vetoed the army bill and in so doing has done wisely. It is a pleasure to find something this administration has done which can be frankly praised, and everyone familiar with the facts and not involved in the personal dispute between General Leonard Wood and General Fred Ainsworth, retired, appreciates that this is a good veto, and one made necessary by the attempt of the Democratic chairman of the military committee, Representative Hay of Virginia, to destroy military discipline in order to enable a friend to vent his spleen. The clause which called forth the veto relieved retired officers from liability to service and from military discipline. It was designed simply to enable General Ainsworth to publish a book attacking his time-honored enemy, General Wood. Possibly Representative Hay should not be too severely blamed, because it is upon just such broad national lines that so much of the legislation of this administration has been based.
