QUEBEC CHURCH IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Quebec, Ont., Nov. 24.—Limilou Parish church, valued at $180,000, was destroyed by fire this morning.

That Midnight Oil.

"I suppose," ventured the interested friend of the family, "that John is still burning the midnight oil at college?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the fond but puzzled mother, "but the college must furnish a very inferior quality of oil. John writes me that some midnights the light is so very poor that he can hardly read his hand."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Thespian's Fiasco.

Among Italians, a correspondent in Rome tells me, the origin of the term "fiasco" for failure is believed to have originated in the remark of an old Italian actor. He had in the course of a play to deliver a somewhat lengthy monologue, in which he invariably scored a great success. It was his habit to always hold some object or other in his hand, changing the article every time he appeared and never using the same thing twice. One evening, seeing a wine bottle (called in Italian fiasco), he seized it and proceeded on the stage to pronounce his soliloquy. Whether it was that on that occasion the audience was extraordinarily difficult to please or whether it was that the actor was not up to his usual form, the fact remains that for once he did not obtain his customary applause, from which time the phrase "fare fiasco" has become general in the Italian language.—London Chronicle.

College Faculty.

From the letter of a father to his son at college:

Dear Harold—Your brief letter came today. I am inclosing the check for the amount you requested. I have heard a great deal of the college faculty. I take it to be the faculty for spending money. Affectionately, FATHER.

—New York Post.

Flying Predictions.

In 1273 Friar Bacon predicted that dying would "shortly" become a general practice, and Bishop Wilkins in 1632 said, "It will yet be as usual to hear a man call for his wings when he is going on a journey as it is now to hear him call for his boots."

Some People Think So.

"Lucia di Lammermoor" is a great favorite of mine," said Mrs. Van Spender to Mrs. Climber, whom she was entertaining at the opera.

"I've never met her," said Mrs. Climber. "Is she attractive?"—New York World.

Proving It.

"Boggs says that he finds that two can live as cheaply as one."

"Yes. They live with his wife's folks."—Browning's Magazine.

I am responsible before God for the work I might have done and did not do.—R. A. Torrey.
