IMMIGRATION DECREASE IS HAMPERING LABOR

half of 1917. There is no reasonable hope that immigration will return to the high figures of 1918 and first half of 1914 for many years to come, if ever. Too many men were killed or permanently disabled to leave a large enough surplus in Europe to make it necessary for the workers to seek wider opportunities abroad, which is the great impelling force that makes people leave the land of their birth for a hazard of new fortune in a foreign land.

The killing of ten million men in five years, who were in the very prime of their industrial productive powers, must have a much more far-reaching effect economically than is generally admitted or realized. The wage standard cannot help but advance with fewer men to do the work of the world. The effect of turning the human tide, that has for more than a century set toward our shores, must be, and is being felt most keenly on our farms, with their necessarily longer hours and lower pay than other lines of industry.

With fewer men to produce, with the supply of goods far behind requirements, labor must be made to understand, that for a time at least, the eight-hour day is really against its best interests. Depriving farmers of needed help must curtail production, whether the farmers desire to do so or not. This will increase food costs, without benefiting the producer of it, as the restriction of production of goods on account of the eight-hour day will artificially keep up prices of what the farmer must buy. We are certainly going around a vicious circle. Until we have the nerve to strike out in the straight line of greater manufacturing production we will keep up the exhausting chase.

JUROR'S RATINGS ARE VANILLA CORNUCOPIAS

Tombstone, Ariz., April 5.—"I gotta have another of them cornucopias," impatiently remarked an elderly gentleman to the keeper of Tombstone's only soda fountain, located in Tombstone's drug store, cabaret, concert hall, news stand and cigar emporium. "If that old fellow don't quit chasing me over here after cornucopias he's going to founder himself," the elderly gentleman went on. It was a bailiff carrying out the court's instructions with regard to the care of the Bisbee "deportation jury."

"You gentlemen are to see that every want of these jurors is filled," was what Judge Sam Patee had told the three bailiffs the night he ordered the cowboy jury locked up for the remainder of the historic trial in which it is sitting.

Those orders were a signal for every juror to satisfy the least whim he had developed in long, dreary months of riding ranges and facing the wind, sun and sand of the desert.

With one man the chief demand had been for talcum after a shave, another is forcing the county to furnish him with a luxurious handsoap which contains olive oil, as a relief from the brand-purchaseable at the crossroads grocery.

With one man the chief demand ice cream cones. Who the dissipating member of the jury is, no one can tell, but that does not alter the fact that all Tombstone knows his falling for vanilla ice cream.

Just before court convenes in the morning a bailiff makes a hurry call at the soda fountain.

"One of them vanilla cornucopias," he says.

At noon he appears again. And twice in the evening—before and after the movie show—it's "ice cream cones for one" and the bailiff disappears behind the swinging doors of the court room.

CORSET BARGAINS! Months ago when labor and materials were much lower than today, we bought three lots of corsets to retail at from $2 to $2.50 a pair. Some time ago we concluded that the factory did not intend to fill our order and we bought elsewhere at a much higher price. We have now received the original order—result, too many corsets. We want to close them out quick and offer choice of lot at $1.89 a pair O'Leary-Bowser Co Bemidji, Minn.
