OLD KING DEFENDS U. S. BOXING RULES

By Henry F. Farrell
 (United Press Correspondent)
 New York, Jan. 11.—Rube Welch raises up in London to remark about the "trick boxing rules" in New York.

The section of the law requiring the boxers to weigh in eight hours before the bout is the hitch, he says.

Welch, who has succeeded Charles R. Cochrane as a fight promoter in the English capital, claimed that because of the observance of the "eight hour" weighing, the bantamweight title was not at stake when Joe Lynch whipped Pete Herman.

"Lynch," he said, "probably went into the ring seven or eight pounds over the class weight."

Had that been the case, Lynch would have picked up ten pounds, as he was two pounds under the required weight of 113 pounds.

Jack McAuliffe, the old light-weight king, got a laugh out of Welch's contention.

"Picking up ten pounds in eight hours is out of reason," he said.

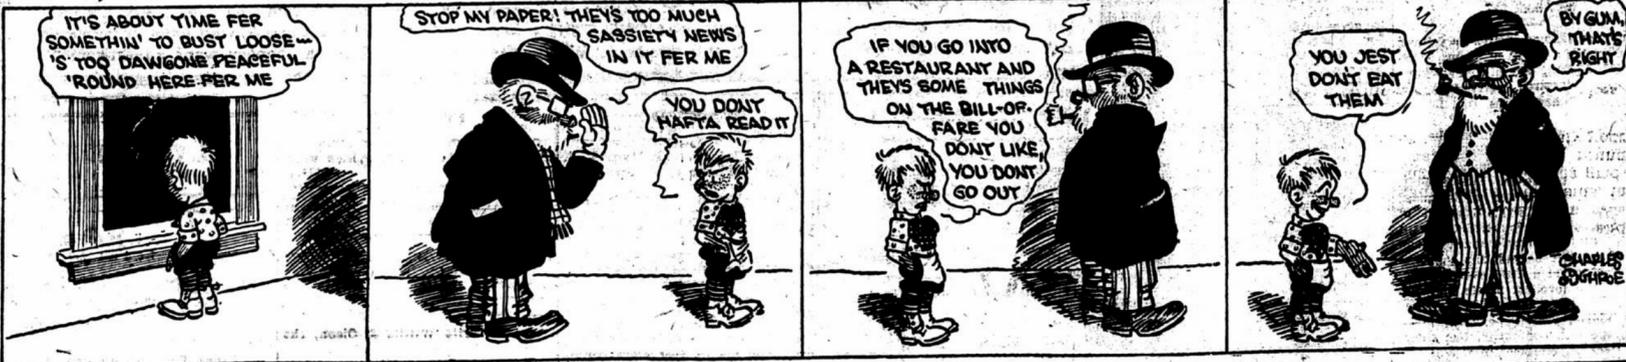

"It might be done if a special effort would be made but it would hurt an athlete and slow him up terribly. It is just a natural process. Just before a big race would a trainer allow a thoroughbred to eat a bundle of hay and drink a lot of water? Not on your life!"

"Take Lynch for instance, or Benny Leonard, or any of the boys who have to work hard to make the weight. They have to regulate their food and train on a non-flesh producing diet. The stomach produces a heavy feeling, slows up the boxer, makes the brain less alert and reduces coordination.

"Lynch never could have put on ten pounds and fought like he did against Herman. The spirit of the New York law-makers was to avoid forcing boxers to come into the ring weakened by making the weight. Eight hours after getting on the scales makes it possible for them to relax and recuperate. There is less danger of physical injuries and the spectators see better boxing, which is the main idea after all.

"The New York rules are practically the same as the rules of the International Boxing Union, the National Sporting Club and other recognized authorities.

The Czechs are depending on America for great supplies of cotton. There is also great need of hides and wool.

Everywhere in the country there is a lack of sympathy for the plight of Vienna, because the people cannot forget the centuries when Vienna fattened and grew rich at the expense of the Czechs, as well as the other smaller nationalities of that once great Austrian empire. However, the hatred against Vienna is cooling somewhat. Dr. Benes, the Czech-Slovak foreign minister, has recommended renewing neighborly relations with Vienna in the not distant future.

Queer Old Canadian Law.

"The Halifax Gibbet Law," a strange old local law, was enacted at Halifax, Yorkshire, at an early period by the woolen manufacturer in that city, for the protection of the manufacturers against the thievish propensities of persons who stole the cloth when stretched all night on racks or wooden frames, called tenters, to dry.

The Gibbet law provided that all persons within a certain circuit, who had stolen property of or above the value of 13 1/2d., were to be tried by the fifth-burgers within the liberty, and if found guilty, they were handed over to the magistrates for punishment, and were executed on the first market day following by means of an instrument similar to the guillotine. The law was relinquished in 1650.

PROFESSOR IS SHOT BY HYPNOTIZED GIRL

By Carl D. Groat.
 (United Press Correspondent)

Berlin. (By Mail).—The danger that amateur hypnotists will further impair public morals is seen by the Vienna Medical weekly, in a discussion of the recent attack on Prof. Wagner-Jauregg, Vienna, by a hypnotized girl.

Jauregg had asserted that crime could not be induced by hypnosis whereupon an amateur hypnotist suggested to a seventeen-year old girl the assassination of the professor and provided her with a pistol loaded with paper bullets. She made the attack. The medical journal, however, contends that Jauregg's theory was not entirely disproved since the hypnotist induced the attack under false premises and suggested to his subject that the whole affair was harmless as it was. Hence it was not a crime.

But, the paper contends that the amateur hypnotists can perhaps spread a suggestion among the public for disruption of the whole process of criminal justice. If such a process were undertaken, then there would be no need for "compulsory hypnosis" as in the Jauregg case, in order to establish a plea for light punishment, since the public would not require punishment. Incidentally, the paper says there have been cases in the past of "compulsory (or intentional) drunkenness," undertaken as a basis for a plea to escape justice.

The Jauregg case has aroused the interest of psychologists and hypnotists throughout central Europe. Since the attack, the girl has been the subject of experiments which revealed the process to which she was submitted in the course of the amateur's efforts to disprove the expert's theory. Under hypnosis, she revealed that the amateur had suggested to her that Jauregg had killed her sweetheart; that she ought to take revenge; and that if she would do it, she could have a theatrical engagement. She had replied she disliked to kill Jauregg and was afraid of a pistol, but later she relaxed as the hypnotist assured her it was harmless.

Jauregg holds that this statement as to harmless robbery the action of the actual criminal element, since the subject was not actually committing a crime.

One Sorrow Removed.

Henry Paget, marquis of Anglesea, a soldier and statesman, was also a man of great temper, and often was brutal to his relatives and servants, not excepting his wife, whom he seemed to delight to beat. He was engaged in this occupation one morning as the unhappy wife stood in an upper hall. A serving maid stopped open-mouthed to witness the beating. "How much happier is that wench!" cried the wife as she glimpsed the girl through her tears. He immediately kicked the girl all the way down the stairs and remarked as he took up the beating again, "Well, there is one grievance of yours removed."

The Child's Character.

So then, you have the child's character in these four things—Humility, Faith, Charity and Cheerfulness. That's what you have to be converted to. "Except ye be converted and become as little children"—You hear much of conversion now-a-days; but people always seem to think they have got to be made wretched by conversion—to be converted to long faces. No, friends, you have got to be converted to short ones; you have to repent into childhood, to repent into delight, and delightfulness.—John Ruskin.

The Best Medicine.
 Two miles of oxygen three times a day. This is not only the best, but cheap and pleasant to take. It suits all ages and constitutions. It is patented by infinite wisdom, sealed with the signet divine. It cures cold feet, hot heads, pale faces, feeble lungs, and bad tempers. If two or three take it together it has still more striking effect. It has often been known to reconcile enemies, settle matrimonial quarrels, and bring reluctant parties to a state of double blessedness. This medicine never fails. Spurious; but pounds are found in large towns; but get into the country lanes, among green fields, or on the mountain top, and you have it in perfection as prepared in the great laboratory of nature.—Dr. Guy Hinsdale in Good Housekeeping.

How to Recognize Real Mahogany.
 You buy a "mahogany" table, pay a good price for it, and then begin to wonder whether it is made of real mahogany. Red gum can be made to look so much like mahogany and Old-Cassian walnut that it is often sold for one or the other of these woods. How can you tell the difference between the false and the true? By looking at the cross-grain, says Popular Science Monthly. If you can see the pores with the naked eye, then you will know that all is well. If you can't see the pores without the aid of magnifying-glass, then you will know that you are in the presence of red gum.

Oh, Willy Man!
 "I don't know whether I like these photos or not," said the young woman; "they seem rather indistinct." "But you must remember, madam, that your face is not at all plain."

Jewsharp's Origin Hard to Trace.
 The Jewsharp is not a harp, and it has no connection with the Jews. The reason for the name is not known. Some authorities believe that it was originally called a jawsharp because it was played with the jaw. Others say it was first called the Jew's Trumpet, the name coming from the French word "jeu"—"game-trumpet" or joy trumpet. Other peoples called it a mouth-drum or a humming-iron while the Italians designated it as the "scaccia pechiera," banisher of thought. The actual origin of the instrument, which is a universal sound-producer, is not known. It is known to be of very ancient origin, for the Chinese books of the twelfth century show the Jewsharp as almost identical with the European form.

Live Electric Plants.
 There are in all about 50 species of electrical fish, but the electrical properties of only five or six have been studied in detail. The best known are various species of torpedo, belonging to the skate family found in the Mediterranean and Adriatic seas; the gymnotus, an eel found in the region of the Orinoco in South America; the malfaterus, the rash or thunder fish of the Arabs, a native of the Nile, the Niger, Senegal and other African rivers, and various species of skate found in the seas around Great Britain.

She Wanted Another.

Irish Language.
 The Gaelic language is the original and historical language of the people of Ireland, though most of that country's inhabitants speak English. Gaelic is now taught in the national schools, Catholic parish schools and colleges in Ireland, as well as at Harvard university, Notre Dame university and the Catholic University of America at Washington. There has been a revival of the use of Gaelic through the efforts of the Society for the Preservation of the Gaelic Language.

CHIROPRACTIC

Consists Entirely of Relieving Pressure on the Nerves at the Point Where They Leave the Spine

DO CHIROPRACTORS BELIEVE IN GERMS?

THAT germs exist is certain knowledge, but that they are the cause of disease is quite a different statement.

The three distinct theories of disease, viz.: Chiropractic, germ and bio-chemic are mutually exclusive. They may all be wrong, but they cannot all be right.

The germ theory was promulgated by a German, Dr. Koch, in 1882, and is by no means generally accepted by medical men or scientists. In fact, some of its strongest opponents are medical men who marshal the most incontrovertible facts with unassailable logic, while the great general public have for centuries lived, laughed, and loved in perfect ignorance and disregard of theory.

It is the dictum of science that we live in a sea of life and that in every drop of water, in every breath of air and every bite of food there are myriads of germs.

If germs cause disease, it follows that the introduction of germs into the living organism would produce disease in every case.

THE instances that prove this untrue are so legion that the germ theorists have been compelled to explain that the germs are impotent UNLESS THE POWER OF RESISTANCE OF THE PATIENT IS SUBNORMAL. For instance, some people cannot be successfully vaccinated while others are so successfully vaccinated that they die. "Germ Theorists" explain the susceptibility of the patient is the measure of his power of resistance.

Power of resistance may be measured in terms of life current or vitality. The stronger the life current the greater the resistance and vice versa, the weaker the life current the weaker the resistance. So we may conclude that where 100 per cent of life current, or vitality, exists the susceptibility is zero, and where 50 per cent exists the resistance is small and the susceptibility correspondingly great.

It requires but little reasoning from these facts to conclude that those who contract typhoid, for instance, owe their susceptibility to a lack of vital force in the bowels, and those who contract tuberculosis, pneumonia, etc., to a lack of resistance in the lung tissue, and so on through the entire list of germ diseases.

CHIROPRACTIC goes several links farther back in the chain of cause and effect. While the germ theorists stop at the susceptibility of the patient, the Chiropractor says that susceptibility is the result of a lack of vital power, or mental impulses, due to pressure on a nerve caused by a misaligned vertebra; and that when the vertebra is adjusted the normal power will again flow over the nerve, the affected parts will again become normal and the disease germs and every other incidental effect will disappear.

No clearer demonstration of the relative merits of antipodal theories could be given than that furnished by the statistics of the recent "flu" epidemic in Iowa, where the death rate was as follows:

Medically Treated, One Death Out of Every 16 Cases
 Chiropractically Adjusted, One Death Out of Every 886 Cases

These figures are at once a death blow to the germ theory and a wonderful recommendation for Chiropractic.

PRAGUE IS ENVIED BY CENTRAL EUROPE

By Lloyd Allen
 (United Press Correspondent)
 Prague. (By Mail).—Beautiful Prague is the envy of all Central Europe.

This is because of the strong economic position of Czech-Slovakia as compared to the remainder of this part of the world.

The Czechs have great factories: a highly educated population; a very efficient government and great national wealth in the form of mines, forests, and agriculture.

Their sugar crop, for example, will total 250,000 tons this year and there is a serious sugar shortage over most of the European continent.

Wherefore the starving towns of Vienna, Warsaw and Budapest think Prague is a lucky town.

Although the fact that the Czechs are better off than the rest of their neighbors, everything is not exactly as it should be. There are plenty of things to worry about from the point of view of Prague.

For example, the country must maintain a big army, at huge expense, to curb any sudden warlike move on the part of Hungary and also guard the valuable Techen coal basin from Polish aggression.

Furthermore there is a very troublesome job here keeping the 3,000,000 hundred per cent Germans from making trouble. The Germans bitterly resent Czech rule—a viewpoint the Czechs don't worry about in the least, remembering the hundreds of years the Czechs were oppressed by German-Austrian rule.

President Masaryk, who happens to be the George Washington of this sturdy country, lives in a huge palace dominating Prague, using only a few of the 800 rooms while other portions of the gigantic buildings have been assigned workers families because of the housing shortage.

While the food supplies of Czech-Slovakia are almost adequate for the support of the country, poor distribution causes much suffering, mainly in Solvackia and Ruthenia.

And there is not enough food in Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia, where 100,000 tons of fats and 180,000 tons of other foods will have to be bought outside the country this year.

Three years ago this hard working little country was part of the great Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, while German proprietors owned almost one third of all the cultivated land and acted as henchmen of the Hapsburgs. One of the first things the newly created Czech government did was to pass legislation that broke up
