Nobody Wants Bungler.
There's no place in progress for the bungler. The business man gets rid of the bungler as soon as he can. No organization wants the bungler on its rolls. Furthermore there's little excuse for the presence of such a nuisance. Above all there is no excuse for you to mess things up. You will do that occasionally in spite of yourself, because you are falsely reported, misunderstood or over-zealous. But you don't have to make a regular thing of it. Correct the past by a more careful present and you will be wiser through the mistake. So toe in, my boy, and make good. You have the world before you and your friends are waiting to help you celebrate the victory.—Grit.

Origin of Some Modern Names.
If one requires the services of a barrel maker an advertisement would be inserted for a cooper, and possibly somebody named Cooper, whose ancestor was a barrel maker would apply for the position. But not all Coopers or Cowpers were barrel makers. Many were makers of cups, working on the medieval equivalent of our lathe, and so some were called Turners.
