FINDS LAKE OF QUICKSILVER.

Value of Product Estimated at Many Millions of Dollars.

A lake of quicksilver, covering an area of more than three acres and having a depth ranging from ten to fifty feet, has been discovered in the mountains of the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico, says the New York World. The value of the product is estimated at many millions of dollars.

The news of this discovery was brought to the City of Mexico by C. A. Bungi, a reputable mining man, who declared he was suffering from mercurial poisoning from having passed much time investigating the extent of the lake and coming in contact with the quicksilver. He went to Santa Rosalia springs in the state of Chihuahua, where he took a course of treatment for his ailment. He returned to Mexico City several days ago fully restored in health.

Mr. Bungi interested F. Lagerwall, a wealthy iron manufacturer of Sweden, who is now in Mexico on business, and J. B. Feelin, of New York, who accompanied Bungi to the state of Vera Cruz and proved the truth of his discovery.

This lake of quicksilver has been known to the Indians of that locality for many generations. It is situated far up in the mountains in an almost inaccessible position. Its surface is partly covered by stones. It is believed that volcanic action in the mountains above smelted the quicksilver out of the cinnabar ore and that it ran down and filled this depression.

Lagerwall and Feelin have agreed to provide the capital for the operation of the rich find. A tunnel will be driven through the base of the mountain and the quicksilver will be brought down by means of gravity.

HORSES HATE FURS.

A western man who had a number of horses that he wished to dispose of in the New York markets was advised to ship them east in the spring or summer.

"They will make a better showing then," explained a trader on the horse exchange, "and impress the prospective purchaser with a sense of safety. It is more difficult to break in a western horse to New York ways in the winter than the summer. It really doesn't take him long to become used to the crowds and noises of the city at any time; the thing that throws him into a panic is the sight of fur. In his mind furs are associated with some enemy or tormentor in the animal kingdom, and the sight and smell of fur garments at once arouses former fears. Some horses never do get over this weakness, and many dealers can vouch for cases in which horses that are otherwise perfectly satisfactory bring complaint from the purchaser on account of their dislike of furs."—N. THE GOVERNOR'S LOGIC.

For reasons well known to those versed in the political history of the time there was but little good feeling between Gov. Greenhalge and Elijah A. Morse, the congressman. Both gentlemen, together with the then lieutenant governor, Roger Wolcott, were guests at the dedication of the new city hall in Brockton in September, 1894.

After the exercises, as the governor's party were waiting at the station for the train for Boston, Lieut. Gov. Wolcott addressed the governor, saying: "Who was that with Morse in front of the city hall?"

"You say he was with Morse?" asked the governor.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Then," said Gov. Greenhalge, with great emphasis, "it must have been Balaam."

AID TO WEIGHT.

A young man who wanted to get on the police force, but was six pounds under weight, applied for advice to a cop who had been on the force several years.

"It is the easiest thing in the world," said the experienced one. "Just before you go in to take the physical examination eat a lot of boiled cabbage and drink all the milk you can. Water used to be the regular thing, but it is not so heavy as milk and the stomach holds less of it. Milk and cabbage are the heaviest foods in the world. You can increase your weight five to ten pounds within an hour."

FINDS YANKEES ARE LIKED.

Writer Says They Are Popular in Many Lands.

Everywhere there is a liking for Americans, which is flattering to our national vanity. We make due allowances for the fact that these people, whether African or Latin or mixed, are approbative and like to say pleasant things that they, perhaps, put a higher estimate on courtesy than on truthfulness. But still it is significant that from all quarters and many sources we find the evidences that the American is distinctly popular with the common people. How he is regarded by the high born I have no means of ascertaining. Everywhere American money is taken and generally it is preferred to any other. Only at Martinique did the hack drivers question about American money, and there apparently only because they did not know how to compute its value.

At St. Thomas one of our party asked a little girl in the street who offered for sale an article if she would like American money. "American money?" she replied. "It's the best money there is." I asked my driver whom he liked best to work for—the Spanish, the English, the Creole (that is, the native of foreign ancestry) or the American. "The American," he replied. "Why?" "Because they are the freest with their money, and they have the most humor." By humor he meant good nature—the American would talk and joke with him as with an equal.

At Kingston I fell into conversation with a negro laborer on the dock. Presently he asked me to give him English money for a dime and a nickel which he had. Quarters and all above that were taken, he explained, at par, but less than quarters were at a discount. I asked him the same question, which people he liked best. "The Americans." "Why?" "Why? A single American gunboat will spend more money than a whole French fleet." Evidently his illustration was taken from a recent experience. "What is your ambition?" asked one of our companions of his negro driver. "To get money enough to go to the states to live." "Why so?" "Because the chances there are so much better for a man."—Dr. Lyman Abbott, in The Outlook.

TOO MUCH TEA DRINKING.

Physical deterioration is alarming all England and health committees are running around seeking the causes and then warning people about their manner of living. One of the dangers they find to be guarded against is the teapot. Excessive use of strongly brewed tea having been proved to be fatal to the best physical condition, to reduce this danger to a minimum the tea should not be made strong and should be drunk within two minutes. But how prevent the working woman, for instance, from keeping the deadly teapot on the kitchen stove and "drawing a cup" whenever she feels so inclined? The climate is really first cause, the cheering poison but the second. One has to be comforted by tea in London's fog and chill and a health committee is powerless to change the climate.
