BAD COINS GIVEN TO CHURCH

New York Vestrymen Worried Over Unusual Number of Counterfeits Discovered.

Vestrymen in a number of New York churches are complaining of the quantity of counterfeit coins found in collection boxes nowadays. Time was when a piece of counterfeit money in the contribution box was a curiosity. Persons who were unfortunate enough to get stuck with spurious coins took good care not to pass them off in church. Whether they are less conscientious now or less able to detect the character of the change they handle is a question still to be answered.

Churchmen hesitate to suspect the congregation of saving up counterfeit dimes, quarters and half dollars for the collection plate as the easiest way of discharging their church duties and at the same time getting rid of bad money, but with all their charitable intentions there are those counterfeit coins to be explained away somehow.

HE WAS A VET.

He was an ancient-looking man, with yellowish whiskers and long hair, and when he passed the village tavern a smart drummer stepped out and accosted him.

"Good morning, pap. They tell me you are an old vet?"

"Reckon I be, bub."

"Fight in the battle of Gettysburg?"

"Nope."

"Chickamauga?"

"Nope."

"Well, were you in the northern army?"

"Nope."

"Ah, then you were under Lee?"

"Nope."

"Oh, I see. You went through the Spanish war?"

"Nope."

The drummer took a deep breath.

"Well, how in the dickens can you call yourself an old vet?"

"Why, bub, I'm the oldest veterinarian in six states. Any horses or cows you want doctored, stranger?"

IMPORTED THEIR VEGETABLES.

Until the end of the reign of Henry VIII., according to the historian, Hume, no carrots, turnips or other edible roots were produced in England. The few that were used were imported, and the state papers contain numerous references to the dispatch of messengers to the continent for rare vegetables and salads to grace the table at important royal banquets. Cucumbers also were unknown until the sixteenth century, and celery owes its introduction in England to the French marshal Taillard, who was imprisoned in England after his defeat by Marlborough.

WHAT DISTINGUISHED IT.

During the visit here of Senor Sorolla, the Spanish painter, whose paintings had such success when exhibited at the Hispanic society, he was literally deluged with invitations to luncheons and dinners.

"Good Heavens!" he ejaculated once. "How can I accept another invitation! Really, I wish that I might answer all these kind people who invite me to eat with them, requesting that they send the food over to Spain uncooked. Then, when I got home again, I might eat it comfortably, at my leisure."

REALISM.

The Author—Well, how did you like my play?

The Critic—Oh, it was very nice.

The Author—Didn't you think the church scene realistic?

The Critic—Intensely so. Why, a great many of us actually went to sleep while it was on.—Cleveland Leader.

A PRACTICAL PLAN.

Visitor—And when your prisoners are unruly, how do you smooth them down?

Warden—Easily, ma'am. We iron 'em.

IN THE STREET CAR.

Big Man (with a grouch)—Will you be so kind as to get off my feet?

Little Man (with a bundle)—Pity, sir. Is it much of a walk?

THE LINGUIST.

"Do you understand French?"

"When I speak it."—The Bollman.

CONTRACT FOR A HISTORIAN

Recorder of Great Conflict Urged to Draw on His Imagination for His Facts.

When Kinglake was writing his history of the Crimean war he received letters from all sorts of people concerned in the war. One day a letter with a deep black border came from two people in the colonies, husband and wife, describing their grief. Their only child had been killed in the Crimea. They wanted to have him mentioned in the "History of the Crimean War." Kinglake was touched, and replied by post that he would do his best if they would send him the necessary particulars. Again a letter, also black-bordered, full of thanks, but with the following conclusion: "We have no particulars whatever to give you. He was killed on the spot, like many others, but anything you may kindly invent will be welcome. We leave it entirely to your imagination."

A KNOWLEDGEOUS PERSON.

An English marvel has come to this country to answer any question as to quantity or date that may be asked him. It is said that knowledge is power, and according to this, that man must be a powerful man, but on the other hand, it is very likely he is nothing of the kind. A man may know so much that the knowledge is in his way and interferes with his thinking and doing.

Knowledge is power only when it is put to work, and to reach this point there must be a disposition or resolution in this person to be something. Always getting knowledge, but never assimilating it or putting it to some good use, is apt to make the individual negative if not worthless. So our educational institutions should always weave purpose alongside of instruction. The person who cannot of will not make the fact he has learned vital is not educated. Industrial training recognizes this doctrine, and so does every other true educational purpose.—Ohio State Journal.

DELIGHTED!

She—You don't allow me to do anything I want! If it goes on much longer, I shall go home to mamma.

He—That I will allow you to do.
