It was with much sadness that his friends here heard of the death of Geo. B. Gordon Monday night at his home in Lexington. Having lived here for several years and being so closely connected with the church and the deep interest that was always his for the people here we in some way feel that Mr. Gordon belonged to Dover. And we feel that it is but due him to write this short tribute to his memory. Mr. Gordon was a man who tried much harder to live a Christian life than the average man. We are told that no man's life is perfect and in his life then may have been some faults, but surely they would be far outweighed by the good deeds he has done for his fellow-men. He was always ready to sympathize and help those who were in trouble. The last time we ever saw him was in the old Christian church here in Dover standing by the gasket of a much loved and honored friend speaking words of comfort and sympathy to the bereaved ones. And we realized with a feeling of sorrow that the sands of life were almost run and that he too would soon lay down life's burdens and be at rest.

Misses Fannie McFadin and Elizabeth Morrison of Lexington spent last Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cooper.

Messrs. Sam and Blanton Vaughan had business in Lexington Tuesday.
