NOT A FRENZIED FINANCIER

George H. Heck's Way of Heading Off a "Sure Thing" Speculation and Saving $900.

George H. Heck takes no stock in frenzied finance, neither does he believe in running unnecessary risks. He is rich, prudent and wise. He was sitting in his office one day when a young man, full of optimism and ideas, rushed in with this proposition:

"Mr. Heck, if you will lend me $1,000, I know how we can make a lot of money. The thing is a cinch, and we can't lose. It's like taking money from a child."

Mr. Heck refused to be carried away by enthusiasm.

"How much money do we need to put this deal over?" he asked, in a calm, judicial tone.

"I hope, then, I see the ink well," Collier remarked as he dodged away.

Goodwin and Oleott roared, but D'Orsay, who had been an auditor of the entire colloquy, said nothing.

A few nights later the Englishman was a guest at dinner. He was talking of American humor, and repeated the exchanges between Collier, Goodwin and Oleott straight enough until he came to the climax.

"And Collier said," D'Orsay quoted, "I'm glad to see the ink stand, and everybody roared. And I don't see anything funny in that."

WHICH?

"Gee, you're a regular sculper, ain't you?"
"Aw, you got it wrong. You mean I'm a sculpin!"

LAND OF THE COAL STRIKE.

Miners on strike no longer feel it necessary to resort to such solemn procedure as the "brothering" which prevailed in England a century ago. This was a feature of the great strike of 1810, and the meaning of it was that the members of the union bound themselves by an oath to obey the orders of the brotherhood under penalty of being stabbed through the heart or of having their bowels ripped up. Melodramatic and sensational details were common in those times, partly in consequence of the state's fiercely oppressive attitude, partly in imitation of certain secret society rites. Fantastic initiation ceremonies were long practiced by the many unions; hence the item for "washing surpluses" which appeared in their accounts.

TAMMY AND HIS STUDENTS.

Professor Duncan of St. Andrews university was affectionately called "Tammy." On one occasion a student in the back bench had made himself obnoxious to the professor by interruptions and talk. "Come down to the front bench, Mr. —" said Tammy, "for three reasons. First, you'll be nearer the board; secondly, you'll be nearer the fire, and, thirdly, you'll be nearer the door." On another occasion a student called out in regard to the problem being worked on the blackboard, "There's a cipher wanting, sir," on which the professor rejoined, "There'll no be a cepphir wanting as lang as you're here."

GREAT CITY'S GIFT TO CZAR.

The gift sent by the city of Paris to the czar, says a dispatch from St. Petersburg, Russia, and presented to his majesty at Tsarskoe Selo by the mayor of Paris took the shape of a superbly beautiful Easter egg encrusted with precious stones. It rested on a cushion of finest silk. The egg is surmounted by a small golden crown of delicate workmanship. Beneath the crown is an almost invisible button attached to a spring. When the button is pressed the egg flies open, disclosing a charming portrait of the little czarvitch.

DID NOT THINK IT FUNNY

Lawrence D'Orsay's Typical Verbal of Willie Collier's Quip in the Lambs' Club.

Nat Goodwin and Chamcey Oleott were sitting in the Lambs club one morning when Willie Collier entered, evidently feeling very much at peace with the world. Near by sat Lawrence D'Orsay, the English actor.

"Good morning, Nat," said Willie airily, "I trust I see you well this morning."

"Rotten, thank you, rotten," said Goodwin, who had been making merry.

"Well, Chamcey, I hope you are well," continued the unperturbed Collier.

"Also rotten, thank you," was Oleott's reply.

"I hope, then, I see the ink well," Collier remarked as he dodged away.

Goodwin and Oleott roared, but D'Orsay, who had been an auditor of the entire colloquy, said nothing.

A few nights later the Englishman was a guest at dinner. He was talking of American humor, and repeated the exchanges between Collier, Goodwin and Oleott straight enough until he came to the climax.

"And Collier said," D'Orsay quoted, "I'm glad to see the ink stand, and everybody roared. And I don't see anything funny in that."

IT WAS WORTH A WHIPPING

Colored Boy Decided He Never Would Have Another Chance to See Court House Burn.

The county court house was burning and the judge was very anxious to arrive at the scene of much of his life work as quickly as possible, and post haste sent the negro house boy to saddle Sintram, his horse.

The judge's sons, seeing Sintram in process of being saddled, preempted the remaining horses and rode off. The little negro considered the matter for a moment and rode off, thus forcing the judge to take a hurried, and, as he considered it, an entirely unnecessary walk of half a mile.

To the surprise and chagrin of the small negro, when the judge caught him he gave him a good thrashing.

When one of the young men remarked:

"Zeck, you should not have ridden father's horse off; you might have known he would have whipped you, and you deserved it."

"I know dat, Mister Dave," responded Zeck, "but I kin git er whippin' 'mos' any day, an' I never will see de cote house burn again."—Los Angeles Times.

WHERE ALL LOVE GARDENS.

In Japan every one loves gardens, knows gardens and makes gardens. The children amuse themselves with toy gardens instead of mud pies, and model relief maps in the sands of school playgrounds. In the recent wars the soldiers, after long marches, amused themselves by making little home landscapes before their tents. In more remote times emperors and shoguns abdicated and joined or established monasteries in Kioto, that they might the better meditate upon the eternal truths, and enjoy gardens of their own designing. Priests, nobles and court ladies all observed the conventions and practiced the rules of landscape art.

Of the making of gardens and illustrated garden books there was literally no end in the leisureed centuries before the restoration.—Century.

SHE STUMPED HIM.

In a recent debate at the Wichita high school the woman suffrage amendment was under discussion. "It would be unwise to give woman the ballot," declared a budding Daniel Webster, in attacking the proposition. "Woman could not be relied upon to exercise good judgment in voting. She changes her mind far too often." The next speaker was a young woman. She arose and cast a pitying glance at her opponent. "I would like to ask my honorable opponent," she cooed sweetly, "if he ever tried to change a woman's mind once it was made up?" The young woman got the decision.—Kansas City Star.

THE REASON.

"It seems to me I am the goat for everybody."
"That's because you're always butting in."
