

That Wonderful Event

IF THERE is a time above all times when a woman should be in perfect physical condition it is the time previous to the coming of her babe. During this period many women suffer from headache, sleeplessness, pains of various description, poor appetite, and a host of other ailments which should be eliminated in justice to the new life about to be ushered into this world.

FAIR EXCHANGE

A New Back for an Old One. How it Can be Done in Lexington.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Lexington residents would do well to profit by the following example.

D. L. Settle, Lexington Ave., Richmond, Mo., says: "I am glad to again endorse Doan's Kidney Pills. They are reliable in curing kidney and bladder complaint. I had been suffering intensely from lameness in the small of my back when I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. They relieved me of the terrible pains and lameness in my back and strengthened my kidneys. I could sleep well at night and the other symptoms of kidney complaint were removed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TOOK HIM TOO LITERALLY

According to Shuster's Expressed Wishes the Offending Baker Was "Gotten Rid Of."

In his book, "The Strangling of Persia," W. Morgan Shuster, the American who took such a prominent part in Persian affairs a few months ago, tells this: "In connection with the bread supply a rather grewsome incident occurred. The chief baker of Teheran was one of the principal grafters in the municipal bread ring and a great trouble maker for the treasury. He was a man of evil record, and reputed to have baked an offending subordinate to death in his own oven on more than one occasion. Speaking of him and his intrigues one day to several prominent nationalists, I remarked that he was the cause of most of the trouble with the bread supply in the capital, was feeding inferior bread to the people, and that he should be 'gotten rid of.'"

"A morning or so afterward, on entering my office rather late, I was informed by one of my Persian assistants that 'the chief baker had been killed in accordance with my wishes.' I leave the reader to imagine my surprise and feelings. As a matter of fact he had been assassinated, and though I have no reason to believe that my own remarks had anything to do with his taking off, I determined thenceforth to be more cautious and precise in my language.

"The unfortunate man was a murderer, and had waxed wealthy by stealing from the poor; often starving people of the city, so no great injustice was, perhaps, done, but the interpretation put by my young Persian friend on his untimely end gave me quite a shock. From that time on the control of the bread became much easier."

HAD TO EAT THE REWARD

Woman Really Didn't Want To, But Dislike Had Entered Into the Matter.

A woman of limited means, who had never indulged in luxuries of any kind, suddenly took to regaling her callers with candied fruits and confectionery. "Don't think I am running into criminal extravagance," she explained to an intimate friend. "These things don't cost me a penny. I get them in the queerest way imaginable. One day I found a very valuable diamond brooch. It was advertised for, and a liberal reward was offered for its return. I returned the brooch.

"It belonged to the wife of a confectioner. She hemmed and hawed about the reward and lamented hard times. Before I had time to decline the reward that had been offered she said: 'Money is so dreadfully scarce. How would you like to take out the $25 in trade—so much candy a week until it is paid off? I think my husband would agree.'

"Then I changed my mind about refusing the reward. I did not particularly want the candy, but I disliked the woman so heartily that I couldn't stand it to let her off without paying something, so just to spite her I am ruining my complexion by trying to eat up that reward."

HORSE NOT DISAPPEARING.

At the present time more than 20,000,000 horses would have to be replaced before the automobile could be in absolute monopoly. In 1900 there were over thirteen and a half million horses in this country. Ten years later the number had increased to 21,040,000. A most pleasing fact is that their quality steadily improves.

CAN YOU BLAME HER?

"Why are you giving up your flat?" "My wife's got so stout that she can't get into the kitchen, and she's sensitive about it."

EVEN HE FAILED.

Argus was boasting of his hundred eyes. "Can you see what an engaged couple see in one another?" we ask.—New York Sun.

SUBJECTIVELY.

"All men look alike," simpered the fluffy young thing. "To you?" queried the mere man. "No; at me."

WOULDN'T MATTER THERE.

"I don't know what to do with my son. He's so irresponsible." "Get him on the weather bureau."
