STATUE ON BALL BEARINGS

Italian City of Venice Probably Has Only Example of the Kind in the World.

There are many kinds of angels ranging in style from those we read about in the Bible to those who bring out talent on the stage, the American Machinist remarks in describing a new type of the seraphic assortment. This angel is "ball bearing." It stands on top of the famous tower known as the Campanile di San Marco, in Venice, and swings to the wind like a weathervane.

The statue of the angel San Marco, which surveyed the old city of lagoons since the sixteenth century, was found but little damaged among the ruins after the collapse of the tower. It was repaired and now stands again on the lofty height, but is supported in a very different manner from the old, for it now rests on modern ball bearings.

This method of mounting allows the statue to be turned around a vertical axis by the wind, so that it swings automatically into such a position that the angel always presents the smallest surface to the wind or storm. If one considers that the large wings of the angel, which are 11 feet high, project straight backward, it may be imagined that the difference of the wind pressure is considerable, whether the wind blows against the small front surface or against the side exposing the large surface of the wings.

SOUGHT TO CHEER COMRADE

Incident of Siege of Santiago That Showed the Spirit of the American Soldier.

It was long ago at the siege of Santiago and two o'clock in the afternoon. Jim Hutchinson of the—th New York Volunteers had lain on the ground for hours, since early morning, in fact, with the hot tropical sun mounting higher and higher in the heavens, not even a drop of water with which to moisten his parched throat, and no shelter but the scant shade of a battered palm tree, awaiting the arrival of the surgeon to dress no less than five wounds which he had received in battle. A young private from his regiment who had been wounded slightly in the heel was carried back and laid alongside of Jim. He asked for a mouthful of water. Jim held up his empty canteen and shook his head. Presently the boy began to moan.

Rising on his elbow, and glancing at the tortured countenance of his companion in misery, Jim smiled, just a little smile of sympathy, and said in a whisper, "Cheer up, pal, I've cabled to Huber's and we're going on there next week as the cripple twins."—New York Evening Post.

HER ULTIMATUM.

"Could you be happy with love in a cottage?" ventured the young man. "Some of these detached cottages are not so bad," said the girl. "But there must be no skimping on the automobile."

"Have you ever heard the 'unvil choros' in English?"

"Oh, yes; my wife entertained the whist club yesterday afternoon. The English was poor, but you could understand it."
