7,500 Employes to Make It

The Anheuser-Busch main plant and branches give employment to 7,500 people. The main plant covers 142 acres, equal to 70 city blocks. There are 110 separate buildings, a city in themselves.

Hundreds of visitors every day go through with guides to inspect this immaculate institution. One cannot see it without the conviction that quality is an Anheuser-Busch rule.

Treatment of Seed Wheat to Prevent Stinking Smut.

Stinking smut or bunt, is a fungus disease which attacks the kernels of the wheat plant and causes a very serious loss to the crop. This disease is propagated by means of spores, which are formed within the grains of the diseased plants. An infected kernel, when broken open, has a very fetid odor, which gives the disease its common name.

During thrashing a large number of diseased kernels are broken open and the spores set free which adhere to the healthy kernels. When these kernels are planted the fungus spores germinate, and immediately penetrate the young wheat seedlings. The fungus continues to grow within the tissues of the plant at the growing tip, but gives no apparent evidence of its presence until the wheat plant begins to form the new grain. At this time the fungus develops very rapidly, and forms its spores within the wheat kernels. The diseased kernels are enlarged which cause the glumes of the wheat flower to stand out, giving the head an enlarged appearance; but other than this, there is no evidence of the diseased condition of the field until some of the kernels become broken and the odor given off.

A machine that has thrashed smutted wheat becomes badly contaminated with these dust-like spores, and if this machine is afterwards used to thrash a grain becomes contaminated. In this way the smut may appear the next season on a farm where it has previously been absent. Clean seed may also be contaminated by being placed in sacks that have previously held smutted wheat. In the same way, a contaminated drill may be a source of smut when clean seed is used.

There is no danger of infection from spores which occur in the soil. The only danger from re-seeding a field which has produced smutted wheat, is the chance of infected grains giving rise to volunteer plants.

The disease is treated as follows: Mix one pound of 40 per cent commercial formalin, with 40 or 50 gallons of water in barrels. This formalin can be secured at most any drug store. Divide the solution between two or three barrels and pour a bushel or so of smutted grain into barrel No. 1, stirring thoroughly with a stick. The smutted grains will rise to the top and must be skimmed off. Pour the solution into barrel No. 2 and dump the wheat out on the barn floor to dry. Again divide the solution between the two barrels, immerse another quantity of wheat and proceed as before. This solution kills the spores of the smut adhering to the healthy grains and the smutted grains themselves are skimmed off.

The wheat should be thoroughly dried before it is sowed. Spread in thin layers to accomplish this, and shovel over occasionally. This solution is poisonous in considerable quantities but as weak as it is used, it will not injure the hands and is perfectly safe to handle.

DOUBLY PROVEN

Lexington Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This Lexington citizen testified long ago. Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Butler Talbott, 2107 Franklin Ave., Lexington, Mo., says: "Disordered kidneys and inflammation of the bladder gave me intense suffering for months. I had trouble with the kidney secretions and suffered from dull, dragging backaches and pains through my kidneys. I was hardly able to work and doctoring brought me no relief. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved me."

LASTING RESULTS.

When Mrs. Talbott was interviewed on October 16, 1912, she said: "I cheerfully confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills and I can still recommend them. The benefit they brought has been permanent."

Funniest Clowns on Earth Are With the Robinson Famous Shows.

A good circus makes all the world akin—at least that portion of humanity within the reach of any big circus. It always has been thus and always will be as long as human nature is human nature.

A boy never forgets his first circus—neither does a girl forget it. It is one of the mile-stones that mark the altogether too fleeting years of childhood's career of innocent and harmless pleasure. What would a circus be without a clown? What would it be without a clown?

The circus clown dates his origin back to the beginning of the circus itself, and from time immemorial he has been one of the most important features. During the growth and development he has by no means been left behind. He is funnier now and can do more tricks than ever before. In the old days one clown sufficed to satisfy the demand for the showgoers, but now it takes 25 for the Yankee Robinson Shows. Nowadays the clown who could not do anything but grin and drive a donkey that played a tattoo with his hind heels on the dashboard of a little cart could not get a job. He must be versatile or look for another position.

The acrobatic work is only a small part of a clown's performance. There is scarcely a humorous phase of life which the clowns do not touch or a heroic feature which they do not burlesque. This always delights the crowd, for one of the things which pleases an American audience is to see some one ridiculed.

It is the rough and tumble and apparently furiously abusive acts, knocks and slaps of the clown that invariably create the most laughter. The more they knock, pound and beat and club each other over the head, face or back, the more pleasing it seems to be.

It has been one of the best circuses on the road for years, but what would its vast array of circus talent amount to if it were not for the tireless work of the "funny fellows?" The presence of the clowns is essential. The burlesque clowns, the rube clowns, the graceful clown, contingent of more than 25 with the Yankee Robinson Shows.

Without the clown, the petite, pretty equestrian could not have his brief visit, the acrobats could not get their second breath, and the musicians could not catch a moment's rest. Originally, a "fillin'" to cheapen the salary list and to serve the above purposes, the circus fools feature with a circus and command liberal salaries. All the clowns will be here with the big shows on Monday, September 15th.

THE SADDLE HORSE AT STATE SHOW

Friday to Be One of the Red Letter Days.

GREATEST IN THE WORLD

Missouri State Fair Will Give One Entire Day to the Saddle Horse—Come to Sedalia for a Week.

"From the time of the Pilgrim Fathers down to the present moment there has never been an hour nor a moment when the saddle horse was so good a proposition either for pleasure, personal pride or pecuniary profit as it is right now. Some people say to me, don't you think the automobile is going to put the saddle horse out of business? I don't think so. I think that in the same way when the mechanical piano player takes the place upon our concert stage of a Palestrina, or when we prefer some phonographic reproduction to the human voice—the flute-like tones of a Meibach or the crystalline brilliance of a Terzuzzi, then we may see the horse, and particularly the saddle horse, disappear in the gasoline-fueled wake of an automobile—and not until then?"

The above is from an address delivered by Herbert J. Kram of Lexington, Ky., before the Missouri Saddle Horse Breeders' Association. He was speaking to an audience of saddle horse lovers—Missourians. Every native born Missourian loves a saddle "boss," and no man with rich, red blood in his veins can long live in this state without inheriting this love.

"The majority of the early settlers in Missouri came from Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, and hence it was but natural that they should bring with them this type of horse," writes E. A. Trowbridge, professor of animal husbandry, University of Missouri.

"To follow the saddle horse from his beginning to his present state is but to follow the ups and downs of the human race in the districts fit which this type of horse has abounded. He has been close to man at all times, has often stood between man and death, and in more than one case has been the means of the saving of a life.

"At the present time the saddle horse still maintains his close relationship and companionship with man. His field of usefulness has been broadened, his reputation has grown, and at the present time he stands the most admired equine specimen that the world has ever produced. He speaks the personality of the people who have improved him. He is a living description of their ideals and ideas of their temperament and their passions, and a study of the saddle horse from this standpoint gives us a clean and clear cut insight into the characters of men and women. It is because of this close proximity that the saddle horse stands second to a human being in the hearts of those who know him."

Recognizing the place that the saddle horse holds in the hearts of the people who will be in attendance at the Missouri State Fair, September 27 to October 3, the board of directors has arranged for the greatest saddle horse show in all history. In addition to hundreds of dollars in prizes to be contested for throughout the week, there will take place on Friday the superb show for the $2,500 saddle horse stake. This great show is open to stallions, mares and geldings and the entries insure an event long to be remembered. Here the best horses, animals of intelligence, stamina, grace, beauty and speed and ridden by men who love them and know them, and who are as much interested in their winning as is a fond mother interested in the success of her own child in a baby show, will make history. This contest will be more than spectacular. At times the thousands of spectators will literally hold their breath and be hushed into silence. Then after the battle has been fought the crowd, with its cheers, will crown the victor and there will go up such a shout as has not been heard since that time when a national conflict waged and the Virginians, unafraid and well mounted, rode the old Whips and other early day saddle horses into the thick of the fight.

In the tomorrow of saddle horse history men will talk of the great show at Sedalia and the peerless performances of the splendid saddlers will be retold.

It is possible for you to see this greatest of all saddle horse shows ever put on by any state and to do so without one cent of additional cost. It is an opportunity such as may never come again.

No, the Missourian who makes the trip to his state fair in an auto of 1914 model isn't figuring on paying for it with a 1914 mortgage. If you think this you've got your states mixed. Now don't get your dates mixed—September 27 to October 3.

Files on the Missouri State Fair? Not Files over the Missouri State Fair? Oh, yes—balloons, aeroplanes and man-carrying kites. September 27 to October 2.

At the Missouri State Fair, who's who? You!
