Bad Watering Accounts for Many Poor Lawns.

Washington, D. C., May 26.—Bad watering is the cause of almost as many poor lawns as droughts, according to the landscape gardener of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Frequent watering of merely the surface of the grass, makes the roots of the grass grow near the surface, and these roots should be made to grow down as deeply as possible in order to secure a fine lawn that will resist the hottest weather of summer.

The best method of watering the grass is to apply a spray for from 6 to 12 hours, the stream being so gentle that water will not collect in sufficient quantities to run off. The water will then sink down into the soil and the roots will grow to a greater depth. When this method is used, the lawn should not be watered oftener than twice a week and then the ground should be soaked, so that the water penetrates for several inches beneath the surface. As a general rule, watering once a week is sufficient to keep a lawn in good condition.

The man who enjoys watering his lawn in the evening for a half hour after returning from work will probably prefer this method to leaving the stream on for a number of hours once a week. If he will divide his lawn area in 6 parts and confine his attention to a different part each evening, he will obtain practically the same results in the long run. Haphazard watering every evening is not advisable. He should be careful, also to use merely a gentle spray, and not continue watering to such an extent that water runs off, as such water does no good. In fact, it may do harm, for it may remove loose dirt from the grass roots and expose them to drought. The strong stream of a hose should not be used, as it helps to expose the roots unnecessarily.

Many people wonder why the drought dries up their lawns in July after they have taken what they consider to be good care of them. The combination of hot winds and dry weather makes July undoubtedly, the hardest month for lawns, and when the roots of the grass are encouraged to grow near the surface by bad watering, and the loose dirt is also removed from them by a hose of strong water power, the results are more disastrous when the lawn had been left alone.

Temperance

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

DIMINISHES RESISTING POWER.

The first man to make an expedition across Greenland was Doctor Nansen. He and his men had to cross on foot, spending several weeks on floating ice. For 40 days they tramped over frozen snow with 50 degrees of frost. In referring to this journey, Doctor Nansen said:

"The only spirits that we took were as fuel for our stove to melt the snow, and that we might have water to drink I believe the use of stimulants to be a mistake."

Capt. Edward Parry, after 12 years' experience in the Arctic regions, said: "Are ardent spirits necessary? I say decidedly, No. It is said they keep the cold out. I say they do not; they let the cold in."

The whole crew of the vessel that took Commander Peary to the north pole, from commander downward, worked on temperance principles. They could face 60 degrees below zero and all hardships better without alcohol. No wines or intoxicants were taken in connection with their work. In the words of Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, the eminent English physician: "You know that alcohol only makes the body feel warm, because it causes more warm blood to come to the surface of the body, there to lose its heat and leave the body colder. You know that cold and alcohol exercise the same kind of influence on the body, and that when working in the cold, even in the extreme cold, that man will work longer and best who avoids alcohol altogether."

NOT IN KANSAS SCHEME.

"It was a hot summer day," says the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette. "It was also dusty. One hundred and fifty men were riding from town to town in Central Kansas, in autos, on a trade extension tour. They were Kansas men—merchants, lawyers, doctors, editors, clerks, mechanics, bankers, farmers. From time to time they stopped at thirteen towns during the day's run. No one in the crowd spoke of beer. No one had any beer. No one at the thirteen towns offered anyone any beer. At most of the towns there were great, deep, stone jars of lead lemonade on the sidewalks with bright tin cups hanging from the jars, and a sign up, 'Welcome, Emporians.' There was no whisky, wine or beer in the crowd. No one missed it. No one spoke of it. For these men, ranging from thirty to sixty years of age, had lived in Kansas thirty years under absolute prohibition. Most of them had never been in a saloon in their hometown in their lives. 'Booze' was as remote from their consciousness as carbolic acid. 'Booze' is not in the Kansas scheme of things. No one thinks of it. Its presence or absence is not considered by the Kansas mind."

GOD'S CYCLE OF REFORM.

The seventeenth century brought to mankind spiritual emancipation, the right to think, freedom of worship; the eighteenth century brought political emancipation, democracy, the right to self-government, the rule of the people by the people, for the people; the nineteenth century brought to mankind physical emancipation, the right to self-ownership, of private contract, to engage, to quit and to the fruits of toil; the twentieth century will bring to mankind moral emancipation, freedom from the intoxicating cup as a legalized institution, and the crowning glory of them all, for there can be no true spiritual liberty, no true political liberty, no true personal liberty to an intoxicated man, people or nation.—Clinton N. Howard.

A SAFE PLACE.

A noted citizen of Topeka, Kan., took his small boy, who up to that time had not been outside of the sunflower state, to an elegant hotel in Washington, D. C. When they came full upon the bar doing business, the Kansas boy, with eyes wide with excitement and horror, pulled his father into a corner and whispered: "We've caught them this time, father, caught them selling it right out in sight. I'll stay and watch and you hurry and bring the officers."

"When the father explained that liquor selling was not a violation of law at our nation's capital, the astonished child turned sadly away from the beauties of Washington and said: "Let's go home to Kansas."

THE WAY THE TRADE SEES IT.

Three men talked together in one of Chicago's big hotels a few days ago. The eldest, about sixty-five years of age, had been in the liquor business since he was a boy of eight; the other two had spent the larger part of their lives in it. Their conclusion was that its days are numbered. The older man, a wholesale dealer of some reputation, at last gave it as his opinion that they would all have to get out of the business by 1920.

IN KANSAS.

According to the figures for 1913 made public by the Kansas state board of control, alcohol was the cause of insanity in only 15 of the 658 patients at the two state hospitals for the insane. This means a percentage of 2.3 due to alcohol. In 1899 the percentage was 5.8; in 1911, 4.4; in New York 31.4 per cent. of the insane patients in the state hospitals are there as a result of using alcohol. In Massachusetts the latest statistics available show 30.6 per cent.
