Forage Poisoning.
The Missouri State Board of Agriculture has issued to farmers and stockmen a news bulletin as follows, quoting the latest statement by Dr. D. F. Luckey, State Veterinarian of this Board:
"Immense numbers of horses and some cattle are dying over the state at the present time. For the want of a better or more accurate name, the trouble is called 'Forage Poisoning.'"
"Cause:—It is undoubtedly due to some mould on the fodder or ear corn. Other feed seldom causes the trouble. Losses are occurring among both horses and cattle, whether on corn stalk pastures or fed ear corn or shock fodder. The heaviest losses have occurred since the fall pastures have become exhausted and horses and cattle are compelled to eat largely of stalks, fodder or corn.
Symptoms:—Cattle often die suddenly without showing any well-marked symptoms. The symptoms in horses vary a good deal and the disease runs a course lasting from one to four days. They first become sluggish or sleepy and these symptoms usually pass unnoticed. Some horses lean against the wall. The animal appears to be blind in one or both eyes. Later there is well marked nervous derangement. Some walk in a circle and others go straight ahead running into obstacles that come in the way. Many cases, in the later stages, become so violent as to be dangerous to handle.
"Treatment:—Most of these cases are not noticed until it is too late. In the advanced stages treatment is useless. No single line of treatment will cure these cases. As soon as a case occurs, all corn and fodder should be withheld and the feed completely changed. Then administer a full dose of salts or raw linseed oil to all animals that have been eating the dangerous feed.
"Prevention:—The prevention lies in putting corn up in the silo. If the silage keeps well and does not mould, there is no danger. If the silo leaks air anywhere and the silage moulds, there is still some danger. Since it is too late at this time to take advantage of this means of preventing trouble, all those who are threatened with danger will simply have to quit feeding the corn and fodder that is causing it. When there is no other feed available, it will pay anyone to sell a few head of stock and buy good, clean alfalfa or other hay for feed. It will be cheaper to do this than to lose a lot of horses or cattle from faulty feed. It is impossible for anyone to give advice that will stop this trouble as long as the faulty corn and fodder has to be used."
