

Associated Charities.

A number of representative business men interested in the associated charities of Lexington met Monday and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

J. C. Graddy, president.
W. B. Waddell, vice-president.
I. E. Keller, secretary.
A. F. Winkler, treasurer.

A finance committee composed of the following gentlemen were chosen to solicit funds: E. J. McGrew, J. G. Crenshaw, E. N. Hopkins and F. Lee Wallace.

The work of the associated charities of Lexington is perhaps unknown to many people living in the city only as they read of short announcements similar to the above. They neither contribute or seek aid from the society and therefore are totally ignorant of what is being done every winter to aid the destitute and distressed.

It ought not to be necessary to more than mention that the society is ready to receive contributions, that it will have in a short time ample means at hand to relieve those who are in want. Every case is investigated before relief is granted. And, though every care has been taken heretofore to give aid to the largest possible number with what the society could praise, it has all been done without the ringing of bells or the blowing of trumpets. It is Christian charity, pure and simple. With all the necessities of life higher in price than in many years, the demands on the society will be proportionately greater. You who are in comfortable circumstances make your contributions early so as to relieve the officers of the society of that much of the work and worry by not having to solicit funds to carry on a work which they gratuitously undertake.
