No need to despair, the history Mr. Hamlin is making will be published early in the next campaign.

The doors of the penitentiary are standing wide open for the party or parties engaged in stealing flowers out of the cemetery. There will be little mercy shown when the guilty are caught.

It becomes more apparent from day to day that some new material is needed in both houses of congress. The barnacles which have accumulated there through the years should be removed so that greater speed may be obtained when vital questions arise.

Bill Stone and Jim Reed seem to have outlived their usefulness in the United States Senate. Reed hopes to make the farmer vote solid by fighting the Food Control bill, while Stone wobbles from side to side hoping through some trick of providence to land on something that will attract the popular fancy a la Bryan.

KEEP UP THE ROADS

Farmers of State Urged By University Dean to "Do Their Bit."

"STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE"

Active Use of Shovel for Few Minutes May Save Many Dollars in Danger Later.

Everyone knows that water is destructive of good roads. After rains, country roads are usually in bad condition, and then is the time for the farmer to "do his bit" and show his patriotism by repairing such damage and preventing further loss. This may be done in two ways: First, by opening up side ditches and connecting the ruts with these ditches so that showers will be promptly carried off; second, by cutting the weeds and brush between fences to let the sunshine dry up the pools that do not drain. On clay roads a small amount of work expended in eliminating ruts at the time the road is beginning to dry up will place it in good condition.

Every farmer should feel a personal responsibility for the stretch of road in front of his own farm, and should exert himself to do what he can to keep it in proper condition to travel. Weeds growing in the highway will scatter their seeds over his fields, and he cannot avoid responsibility for this neglect simply because they grew outside his fence lines.—E. J. McCausland, Dean of the School of Engineering, University of Missouri.

Did you ever travel over country roads where bridges and culverts were always at a different level from the roadway on either side? How much energy is wasted and how many vehicles are wrecked by the presence of chuck holes on both sides of culverts and bridges? It can be easily shown that the expense of avoiding such chuck holes bears a very minor relation to the waste caused by their presence.

The mere discomfort of riding in a vehicle over such obstructions is the least important phase of the matter. It is the wear and tear on the material equipment for travel and transportation that makes this an economic problem rather than one of mere comfort of travel.

The active use of shovel about ten minutes would frequently be sufficient to repair a bad place that might daily cause a damage of many dollars. "A stitch in time saves nine," and a dollar expended in timely road repairs will save nine dollars in material damage.

Don't Be Tricked Into Using Alum Baking Powder

If demonstrators of inferior baking powders endeavor by means of false tests and statements to induce you to use their products, find out by carefully reading the label if the powders they have offered contain alum.

And remember that alum is derived from mineral sources, and declared by many medical authorities unsafe to use in food.

To insure healthful food and the best results in baking, prudent housekeepers always use
