Imagine the wailing and nashing of teeth if Mr. Harding stands pat on the order of President Wilson placing postmasters in the civil service. It would only be fair play if he did; as President Wilson did not interfere with the order of President Taft, placing all assistant postmasters in the civil services. But no telling what will happen under "normalcy."

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. This alone is enough to convince one that it is medicine of more than ordinary merit. Give it a trial and you will find this to be the case.

John McClelland and Paul Nelson, of Nelson, Mo., spent yesterday here with Mr. and Mrs. M. R. McClelland.

George Kerdoff and family of Kansas City, spent Thanksgiving here with relatives.

Constipation.

The beginning of almost every serious disorder is constipation. If you want to enjoy good health keep your bowels regular. This is best accomplished by proper diet and exercise, but sometimes a medicine is needed and when that is the case you will find Chamberlain's Tablets are excellent. They are mild and gentle in their action, easy and pleasant to take. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

Misses Mary Cavanaugh and Margaret McDonald of Kansas City, spent yesterday here with relatives.

Miss Mildred Lohoefer of Aullville, spent yesterday here with Miss Margaret Roberts.

An Agreeable Surprise.

"About three years ago when I suffered from a severe cold on my lungs and coughed most of the time night and day, I tried a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was surprised at the promptness with which it gave me relief," writes Mrs. James Brown, Clark Mills, N. Y. Many another has been surprised and pleased with the prompt relief afforded by this remedy.

KEEP YOUNG.

People with bad backs and weak kidneys are apt to feel old at sixty. Many old folks say Doan's Kidney Pills help them keep young. Here's a Lexington case:

W. E. Tarlton, retired farmer, 2008 Main St., says: "I am a man past seventy-seven years of age and I believe the occasional use of Doan's Kidney Pills has kept my kidneys in good condition. Years ago I was troubled a great deal with kidney weakness. Every muscle in my back was sore and lame and sharp twinges of pain would often catch me in the small of my back. My kidneys were weak and the secretions were highly colored and contained sediment. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and bought some at Marshall's Drug Store. Relief soon followed and it was not long before Doan's Kidney Pills cured me up in good shape again. Since that time I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on as a tonic for my kidneys. They keep me in fine condition. I certainly think Doan's are a fine kidney remedy."

"HOLY RUSSIA" A MISNOMER

Exposé Shows That Many of the So-Called Sacred Relics Are Dummies.

For centuries the Russians used to style their country "Holy Russia," but under the bolshevist regime they must forsake the appellation, for so-called holy relics of Russian saints on examination prove to be gross deceptions on the part of monks. Annually thousands of Russians made pilgrimages to these shrines and contributed money according to their means, writes Dr. Peter J. Popoff in Current History.

In the presence of high dignitaries of the church and representatives of the people, the relics of St. Mitrofan, a contemporary and co-worker of Peter the Great, were opened at the monastery of that name at Varonesh, and found to be an imitation of a human body stuffed with cotton. Next were examined the relics of St. Tikhon at Zatonak, in Varonesh province, and found to consist of cardboard containing some bones. For centuries men and women have kissed what was supposed to be the hand of St. Mitrofan, seen through a minute opening in the white kid glove of the saint, and believed the saint to be a "great miracle worker."

JOKES MADE IN THE PULPIT

Men of the Cloth Have Frequently Been Gifted With a Keen Sense of Humor.

Ministers of religion seem to be blessed with a sense of humor, remarks London Tit-Bits. A reverend gentleman apparently possessed an overwhelming sense of humor, but his jests and jokes, although occasionally ill-timed and delivered at inopportune moments, were nevertheless amusing.

It is said that once on going up into his pulpit, he found that the pages of his sermon had been put out of order by a brother humorist who was present, and as he had not numbered them he was unable, or most likely did not trouble, to get the pages in order again.

He explained the matter to his flock, and then told them who was responsible. He then said, "I've no time to put the leaves in their proper places. I shall read it as I find it. You can put it together when you get home." He then read through the confused mass of paper. One wonders what his congregation thought of it!

BY SOME MISCHANCE.

Spying an empty seat on a street car, I hurried over and sat down next to a well-dressed young woman. In placing my handkerchief in my pocket I must have gathered up somehow the girl's silk ribbon sash, for as she rose to go she noticed her sash in my pocket, and, turning to me, asked me to kindly give it to her. I pulled out my handkerchief and along with it came the two ends of her sash, much crumpled and mangled from having lodged in my pocket. I apologized, and promptly buried myself in my newspaper to hide from the amused eyes of all around me.—Exchange.

GETTING PRACTICAL.

"You know Boobins, the tenor who used to sing to Miss Skeezicks that every morn he would bring her violets?"

"Yes; did he?"
"That's what he did, and they got married; and now they're living in the country where every morn he has to bring her two buckets of water and help wipe the dishes!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

FULLY INFORMED.

"What we need is production."
"So I have heard," replied Farmer Corntossel, "from a whole lot of summer boarders who don't do anything except sit around and wait for some one to bring the glad tidings that dinner is ready."—Washington Star.

THE ONLY WAY.

"I know he's rich, but he's such a horrid old man I don't see how Grace could marry him."
"Because there's no other way to be his widow, my dear."—Baltimore American.

HOMEOPATHIC DOSE.

"Why are you lashing yourself into such a state of excitement?"
"Because I want to get off the beaten track."

YUCATAN MAYAS STILL PAGAN

Religion of Their Fathers With Its Legends Is Kept Alive by Indians.

The cities of a nation may fall into decay, the life of a people be altered by conquest, but their beliefs and traditions remain. This is a fact which emerges from all welter of human activity and event, but nowhere is it more strikingly illustrated than in the history of the Mayas of Yucatan.

The Spaniards came with their civilization, their customs, their religion, which in the zeal of those fiery times allowed of no compromise with other beliefs. The natives were pagans. The plain duty was to make them Catholics. This was done rigorously, relentlessly, but today, under a thin veneer of Catholicism, the worship of Paganism, the Sacred Four, the old Yucatan religion is still practiced in Yucatan. The legends and stories believed by the Indians today are the same told by their ancestors, and the same spirits of good and evil people the forests and inhabit the mountains and plains.—Pan-American Magazine.

MODERN IMPROVEMENTS

"I must go to the kitchen now."
"What for?"
"To see if dinner is getting along properly in the fireless cooker."
"Ask the ouija board."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LOYAL.

Many stories have been told of certain women since they have received the ballot in regard to their seeming indifference to the use of it, but a Jay county woman had an unusual answer as to why she would not take advantage of the right of suffrage.

A young woman was taking the poll and on asking about political affiliation, was somewhat surprised to hear the woman reply:

"I am not going to register and I am not going to vote. I have two husbands dead—one was a Republican and the other was a Democrat, and I'm not going to vote against either one of them."

The poll-taker wondered what her dead husbands were running for.—Indianapolis News.

FRIEND OF BOTH.

There is a widely known English soldier and sportsman who will be able to claim family relationship with the White House after March, 1921, no matter who is our next president. Maj. Harding Cox, author, composer, painter and all-around athlete in his varsity days at Cambridge, carries a name that combines those of his paternal and maternal ancestors. He is one of the best-known men about town in London.—Boston Post.

IN FAVOR OF THE RICH.

Mrs. Multirox—How can you pretend to give me better bargains than you do anyone else? You charged me a dollar a pound for bacon and sold the same thing to Mrs. Middleclass for 75 cents.

The Market Man—But, my dear madam, 75 cents was all the money Mrs. Middleclass had.

UNBANDITLIKE.

"The man you see yonder is a highwayman."

"Good gracious! Such a gentle, manly looking man a robber?"

"No, not at all. An aviator."—Baltimore American.

LEAKAGE.

"We used to hold investigations to see whether money was leaking out," roused Senator Sorghum.

"Isn't it the same way now?"

"No. Now the idea is to hold investigations to see whether too much money isn't leaking in."

It Makes Every Forkful of Manure Count for a Bigger Yield

ASK any user of the John Deere Spreader and he will tell you it is the best machinery investment he ever made—not only because it saves hard work and valuable time, but because it makes every forkful of manure count for a bigger crop yield.

Manure goes farther and does more good when you use a John Deere Spreader. You can spread manure evenly, heavy or light—no under-fertilized or over-fertilized spots.

Come in and see this better spreader. Here are a few things about its operating advantages we want to show you.

You get a low down spreader with high drive wheels. It is easy to load from the front to the rear and because of the high drive wheels and roller bearings it is light draft—a most valuable combination.

No clutches—no chains—few adjustments to cause trouble—and it is extremely simple—only about half the parts that are necessary on the ordinary spreader.

The main working parts are mounted on the rear axle, where they cannot get out of line to cause blocking, heavy draft and breakage.

The beater drive is much like the simple triple-gear horse-power. The gears are enclosed and run in an oil bath.

There are so many other good features about this spreader that we want you to see it. You will quickly see why there are so many satisfied users of John Deere spreaders.
