

FRESH FORCEFUL FACTS!

Facts are always more or less forceful. The stronger the fact the greater the force of many a strong argument. Here every department teems with just such facts. Poor goods made of poor material, ill fitting or ill made garments are not economical at any price, no matter how cheaply priced, only the best, the very best your pocket book can afford is in the end the most economical. This big stock fairly bulges with just such economies. Goodbuying means good selling. Mimnaugh set the pace for modern merchandising in this town, and I have done more to knock out high prices and put high class merchandise within the reach of all than any store that ever done business in Newberry.

Could Not Trust Him.

After a wordy argument in which neither scored, two Irishmen decided to fight it out. It was agreed, says the Washington Post, that when either said "I've enough" the fight should cease.

After they had been at it about ten minutes one of them fell, and immediately yelled, "Enough! I've enough!"

But his opponent kept on pounding him until a man who was watching them said:

"Why don't you let him up? He says he's got enough."

"I know he says so," said the victor, "between punches, "but he's such a liar you can't believe a word he says."

At Least A Help.

"Uncle David" was and Oldtown character, some of whose sayings have been put into black and white by Mr. Norton in his "Sketches" of that vicinity. David used to run rafts of lumber down the Penobscot, and was wont to boast that he "always sold to one man, and when he didn't sell to him, he sold to somebody else."

One day Uncle David was standing on the river bank when a stern-wheel steamboat passed. He gazed long and thoughtfully at the vessel, and then, turning to a bystander, said, in a tone of deep conviction:

"That wheel is a great service to that boat."

Ruined His Hat.

"Leavenworth," said Neil O'Brien, of the Dockstader show, yesterday, "has or used to have, some of the toughest negroes in the world. A few years ago I was with a minstrel show there and shall never forget an instance that happened. The negroes were wild to get in the gallery first and get the front seats. About two hundred of them were crowding against the door and quarrelling. Those behind were pushing. The door was in imminent danger of being broken in when two policemen arrived on the scene and began beating the negroes back with clubs. One negro who had on a new hat, was struck over the head and received a long gash on the scalp. He worked his way to the street, where I was standing watching the row. As he came up another negro saw the scalp wound and, with eyes bulging out, said:

"Ma goodness, Sam! Look at your haid."

The other negro brought his hand holding his hat, around from behind him, and replied:

"Haid hell! Look at that hat!"

Reflections Of A Bachelor.

It is a good law that works on election day.

There isn't so much fun in being wicked as there is in having people think you are getting it that way.

A girl has an awful lot of clothes to get married and then no chance to wear them because of the babies.

One nice thing about being in love is it doesn't make any difference how much of a fool you are in other ways.

You could hardly ever make a woman believe that she ought not to judge a man's business ability by the way he treats his family.

Pointed Paragraphs.

If there were no fools, fads would soon die out.

Hope is the bridge over the stream of disappointment.

A divorce suit is usually more expensive than a wedding suit.

No man can be a hero to himself when he is up against the toothache.

About the best way to induce a woman to keep a secret is to keep it to yourself.

Whether home is heaven or the other place often depends on the cooking.

If a man owns street railway stock, he never recommends walking as an exercise.

Women are hard to please. One will kick because her husband is jealous of her, and another because he isn't.
