

THE CORN EXPOSITION PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

MUCH CREDIT DUE TO PRESIDENT A. D. HUDSON.

The First Corn Exposition Ever Held in the South Pulled Off in Columbia.

Columbia, Dec. 6.—Magnificent and successful beyond all expectation. This statement tells the story of the South Atlantic States Corn exposition, which opened at Craven Hall—the "Corn Palace"—today and which will continue through Friday. There are over 700 individual exhibits, from North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The most successful farmers of the three States are attending, and several thousand more are expected before the end of the week. Many of those attending the exposition have been farmers from childhood. When the hall was opened and the inspection of the exhibits was commenced, these men expressed their surprise at the exhibits shown, for they had never dreamed that such fine corn could be grown in the South.

Prize Competition Sharp.
Approximately $10,000 in prizes will be given away during the week, besides a number of handsome trophy cups from newspapers and commercial organizations. There is sharp competition and the judges have an arduous task before them in making the awards. Cheap railroad rates have been granted from all points in South Carolina, Georgia and North Carolina.

The aviation meet will be held in Columbia tomorrow and Thursday. The features of today's program were the welcome addresses delivered this afternoon by Mayor Gibbs, of Columbia, and Gov. Ansel, on the part of the State of South Carolina. There was to have been an address tonight by C. L. Blease, of Newberry, governor-elect of South Carolina, but illness prevented Mr. Blease from attending.

Boy Champion Present.

Among the visitors here for the exposition, the one who is attracting the most attention, is Jerry H. Moore, of Winona, in Florence county. He is 15 years of age and produced 228 bushels and 3 pecks of corn on one acre of land. He has a large exhibit. He is a very modest young fellow and knows corn. The old farmers present found him well acquainted with the subject of corn. He has created a most profound impression by his simplicity and modesty.

There was a visitor at the exposition this afternoon who received more attention than any other. This exhibitor was Hannah Plowden, of Clarendon county, who produced 120 bushels of corn on one acre of land.

Cooking School.

There is a cooking school in connection with the exposition, which is being conducted by the students from the practice home at Wintthrop college. All corn products are being prepared. The school is under the direction of Miss Carrie Hyde, who has charge of the practice home. The young ladies here are: Misses Essie Hyrne, Lillian Gentry, Clara Aiken Gibson and Quintette Dantzier.

Boys' Department.

The largest exhibits in the boys' department are from Aiken and Barnwell counties. There are over 400 exhibits by members of the Boys' Corn clubs and over thirty counties are represented.

There are many exhibits from North Carolina and Georgia and a number of farmers from these two States are expected to attend tomorrow.

The exhibits are attracting a great deal of attention. The decorations of the hall are beautiful. There are more than two score South Carolina flags hanging from the ceiling.

Plans are already on to make this exposition emphasize the fact that the exposition emphasizes the fact that the farmers of the South have at last come to realize the value of the corn crop.

The success of the exposition is due to the efforts of A. D. Hudson, of Newberry, who is one of the most successful and progressive farmers in the State.

Gov. Ansel, delivering a welcome address on the part of the State of South Carolina before the exposition, said that the great collection of corn marked an era in the progress of the South. He spoke of the future and congratulated the farmers present for their efforts in making the South Atlantic Corn exposition a success. He said that the farmers should take lessons from the boys of the State, who had made such fine records for corn production. Gov. Ansel recalled the old days, when "corn shuckings" were popular. He urged the farmers to assist in the work of moving the corn cribs from the West and to bring about the time when there would be "plenty of hog and hominy" for the increased production of corn.

more live stock and hogs. He urged the farmers to diversify their crops. He was most enthusiastically received and his advice was good.

Welcome From Mayor Gibbs.
Another welcome address was delivered by Mayor Gibbs, of Columbia. He gave a cordial welcome to every one present and said that the exposition marked a period in the progress of South Carolina and the South.

Following the address of welcome there was a corn judging school, under the direction of J. N. Napier, of Clemson college. This school is one of the most important features of the exposition.

McIver Williamson Talks.

Columbia, Dec. 6.—McIver Williamson, whose name will always be connected with corn in South Carolina, the man whose one short story set more farmers to thinking along intelligent lines than any other article, tonight talked corn to over 100 farmers and a large number of visitors, at the South Atlantic States Corn exposition, which is being held in Craven Hall.

Declaring that the corn exposition marks a distinct epoch in the history of South Carolina, Mr. Williamson launched into the dissertation of corn, which was interesting and food for thought for every one here. He said that the exposition marks the turning point in the old methods to the new, and that he had not expected to live to see such a movement consummated. "We should all be proud of this exposition," said the speaker. He told the farmers present that the sons were teaching them how to farm, and that one of the most gratifying reasons for the corn movement is that the boys would be farmers tomorrow. He spoke of the corn movement as a great educational campaign. "Wherever there is plenty of corn, the hogs will come without calling." This statement was made in introduction by Mr. Williamson, in introducing a eulogy on "the hog," which is almost as prophetic as his short, but to the point, story on "corn."

Following his discussion of the hog, he gave a technical, yet entertaining lecture on how to grow corn. He gave his experience and the fight that he kept up for years to gain knowledge for more and better corn on South Carolina land.

A Great Success.

Columbia State, Sth.
The South Atlantic States Corn exposition now in progress in Craven hall marks an epoch in the history of the South.

Never has there been so much fine corn brought together south of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi river.

It is not a pleasure event, but is educational. The farmers of North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia are being shown in a concrete form that the great, boasted corn belt of the West has at last moved South. All of the prizes, aggregating $10,000, were awarded yesterday.

Prizes Announced.

The grand sweepstakes winners for North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia at the corn exposition were announced yesterday as follows:

- Best prolific variety white corn, 10 ears: J. C. Lewis, Reedy Branch, N. C.
- Best single ear variety white corn, 10 ears: A. D. Hudson, Newberry.
- Best individual display: A. D. Hudson, Newberry.

Showing What Small Savings Will Do In The Aggregate

The largest railway company in this country recently borrowed fifty million dollars, on its bonds, from the people of France. This is remarkable, owing to similar loans made by same people to other countries, about the same time. Where do the French people get all of this money? Jno. D. Rockefeller, after returning from one of his trips to Paris, tells the secret in seven words: "The people of France save their money." YOU cannot afford to take any unnecessary risk with your hard-earned savings. During these prosperous times the temptation to invest in some form of speculation is very great. All sorts of inducements are offered, and, unless great caution is exercised, errors are likely to be made which will prove costly. The shrewd investor does not put his money into every scheme presented which promises large returns, or into some speculation guaranteed to return you something for nothing; rather is he satisfied with ABSOLUTE SECURITY for both PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST such as is afforded by this Bank.

Would it not be well for you to begin saving NOW, according to the policy of the French people? Your account, large or small will be welcomed. Make a START RIGHT AWAY by coming in and talking over your interests with our Cashier.
