Last Monday the Sumter authorities phoned Policeman Peavey to look out for a strange negro who was on a freight coming this way. Mr. Peavey met the train, and arrested the darkie, who was wanted in Sumter for breaking into a store. He was put in the town guard house to await the officers from Sumter. While the storm was going on that afternoon he tore some of the wood work from around the guard house window, and getting a piece of scantling broke the bars and made his escape.

Edith Cavell was an English woman who lived in Belgium. Incited by the horrors which she daily saw practised by the German invaders on defenseless women and children of that stricken nation, Miss Cavell aided a number of them to escape to England. For this offense, she was taken prisoner, court martialed, and executed. Her name will go down in history as one of the brave women who did their bit to withstand the terrors of the Prussian Monster. See "The Spy."

It would require more than 2,000 letters with 3 cents postage on each one to notify Red Cross subscribers that the July installment is now due. All who are able to pay the July installment now will very likely read this notice, and if they will send it in without being notified individually they can save a lot of work and expense for the Red Cross.

The stamped envelopes ordered about a month ago have not been received yet and that is why receipts have not been mailed to persons who have made payments.
