to keep up," is the usual lowland explanation. So it is evident that not much sympathy or interest is expended on the poor whites by their neighbors, either as they were or as they are.

Origin a Question
 Not so much is known of the origin of the mountaineer or how he got left behind in the wilderness, but his future, because of his sturdiness, is a matter of optimistic speculation. There is not just a little scattering of these people, either, sufficient to lend picturesque color, but there are some 3,000,000 of them all told, and until the railroads reached them they were scarcely better off than the animals of the forests and hardly less wild. The little children would scamper into the woods at the approach of "furriners," as they call anyone not living in the mountains, and real foreigners, by the way, they call the "outlandish," which is literal after all.

There were two classes of early settlers. Most of them were the fine old pioneer stock, seeking the freedom and independence and the great opportunities the rich, new country offered, but there came also many undesirable, criminals, who were dumped on our shores.

Information regarding the origin of the feudist element is meager indeed, but in all probability they descended from the early undesirables as well as the degenerate fringe of society known as the "poor whites." Backed into an eddy, with no traditions or ideals to guide them, it is small wonder the mountain whites are just what they are today.

Until the 18th amendment made moonshining a heinous crime, the moonshiner and his moonshine were accepted as part of the scenery of the South, and local authorities were not greatly agitated over his small traffic. In the old days it was generally accepted that the mountaineer sold "red eye" because it was easier to carry juice in bottles than to tote corn to market in bags on his shoulders through the steep hills, and, anyway, it was his business.

Big Profits in Moonshine
 Moonshine whiskey, made in the old way, was pure whiskey, though too new to appeal to the connoisseur; but since prohibition it is an entirely different matter. He measures his corn crop by the gallon, and that while the market price of corn is about a couple of dollars, with no demand, he transforms his corn into a commodity from which he derives a profit of 500 per cent—maybe 1,000 per cent.

I wanted to take back the pleasant picture of at least one homey cabin, but I did not find it. There was neither the picturesqueness of the negro cabins nor the delectable smells of cooking that usually issue therefrom—nothing of romance or beauty, although in the midst of wondrous beauty. Only sordid poverty, dejection and hopelessness, apparently; no evidence of any effort to create an atmosphere of home. Some of the poorer classes in the mountains live in cabins of shacks with not even a window. They have never had windows and they are not necessary to them. Their "china" is tin; boxes or blocks serve as chairs, while their beds are bags of straw. Life is one long struggle to keep soul and body together, and they do not know how to better their condition.

To the stranger they are frank and friendly, and always hospitable. No apology for their poverty, but "Welcome, stranger, to what we got," is the almost invariable greeting.

There are many schools, colleges and hospitals working ceaselessly for the betterment of the mountain

EVER HAVE IT

If You Have, the Statement of This Manning Citizen Will Interest You

Ever have a "low-down" pain in the back?

In the "small" right over the hips? That's the home of backache.

If it's caused by weak kidneys, Use Doan's Kidney Pills.

Manning people testify to their worth. Ask your neighbor.

James E. Reardon, machinist, Manning, says: "Some years ago I used Doan's Kidney Pills and found them a valuable remedy. At that time my kidneys were giving me considerable trouble. I had backaches and pains across my loins. I used Doan's and they gave me prompt and lasting relief."

AFTER A LAPSE OF SEVEN YEARS, Mr. Reardon said: "You can still use the statement which I gave some time ago praising Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's certainly are a good remedy for kidney trouble."

boys and girls, and the effort is ever on the direction of practical training which will not change too much their natural characteristics. They are taught not to despise their poor cabins but to make better ones, and when enough of boys and girls are taught to make better homes, better farms and better forests they will have come into their own, and the mountaineer will no longer be a problem, but an asset.

BAGS BUTTERFLIES WITH SHOTGUN

In the forests of Northern Australia there is to be found a butterfly that is always hunted with powder and shot. This is a brilliant-hued creature, highly valued by collectors. It is very shy and hovers about the upper branches of the trees, seldom approaching within 20 feet of the ground.

For a long time the only specimens in collections were the frayed and bedraggled individuals which, because of injuries to their wings, had dropped below their zone of flight.

A traveling American naturalist went to Australia determined to get some perfect specimens of this rare insect. For several days he strove with long nets and short nets to entrap some of the beautiful creatures of the upper air. He raised ladders and climbed trees at the peril of his life and limb, but the wary butterflies kept beyond range of his nets. Yankee ingenuity was not to be beaten so easily, however. This entomologist hit upon the idea of a decoy.

Loading his gun with the smallest shot he had, he brought down one of the high-fliers. It was badly battered, but he patched and refurbished it up to an appearance of respectability, and spread it on a bush top in a conspicuous spot ten feet above the ground, arranging the wings with as close a resemblance to life as possible.

Curiosity is a besetting failing of butterflies. Presently two of them noticed their departed comrade, and began to circle lower and lower above the bush. Others joined in the investigation, and finally the patient collector was able to capture one of them by a swift movement. This sent the others soaring away in alarm, but in a few moments they were back again, and before the day was over the naturalist's ingenuity was rewarded by the capture of half a dozen perfect specimens, which afterward became the property of various scientific museums. Since then this has been the recognized method of taking that species of insect.

LITTLE ROMANCE WITH HILL FOLKS

Poverty and Hopelessness With Mountaineers.

LIKE THEIR FREEDOM

Strikes in Cumberlands Bring Men of the Mountains Once More Into Limelight.

 When the smoke of battle clears away and the excitement over strikes and feuds dies down in the Cumberlands there will still remain the mountaineers. The mountaineer as he is today may be lacking in many things, but in his life of freedom and independence he is an American with many of the characteristics of pioneer days, and he has given a good account of himself in history. It has always taken some violent upheaval to jostle him out of his hills and hollows. The Confederate war brought out stalwart supporters on both sides, but after the chaos of reconstruction the sons of the hills were apparently forgotten and lapsed into more complete isolation than ever. Now that local conditions have once more directed the spotlight of publicity on him revealing him in all his pathetic grandeur, it may prove the permanent turning of the tide in his favor.

"They are just plain onery," was about the most complimentary comment that could be had from the lowlanders in West Virginia regarding their mountain neighbors. The lowlander is not given to sentimentalizing over the mountain neighbor and his hard luck, and are not deeply impressed when it is suggested, that maybe the poor things haven't had a chance. "They got left behind civilization because the ywere too onery"

"Kerosene costs only about half what it did last year"

A practical way to save coal this fall and winter

The Perfection Oil Heater will prove more economical in over a million homes this year than ever before. Coal prices have changed but little in the last twelve months, while Aladdin Security Oil, the best kerosene you can buy, has gone down nearly 50%.

The Perfection is an efficient heater. There's no waste of fuel, no ashes that represent many of the pounds that go to make up your ton of coal. Rooms and hallways that are used only a few minutes each day are an added source of wasted heat, greater, probably, than you imagine.

Use your coal heater to keep the whole house warm. Then in cold weather, instead of "rushing" the fire all day, make the living rooms comfortable by using a Perfection, just where you want it—in the bay window or the opposite side of the room from the radiator.

You can burn a Perfection for about 10 hours on a single gallon of kerosene. Your hardware or department store salesman will gladly point out its simple construction and smokeless wick adjustment to you.

GOLD MINING REVIVED
 Sacramento, Oct. 24.—A pronounced revival of activity in the gold mining fields of northern California and Nevada, where the 49ers once operated is being manifested, according to reports reaching this city, and most of it, it is believed, is due to the declining cost of materials used in gold mining operations. Reduced cost of labor is also a factor in the renewal of activity.

Within the last two weeks much work has been begun in the Mother lode district in Amador and Calaveras counties of California as well as in the Grass Valley district of this state. Nevada gold and silver mines both are showing signs of awakened interest.
