Paper manufacturers admit they are making money. They have invented a system that gets all the spare cash of newspaper publishers and leave no come back.

The more we see of magazines the more we are convinced that their circulation largely depends on the character of pictures used in connection with corset advertising.

Why is it that autoists see the need of repairing county roads so much quicker than non-autoists? It is nearly impossible to get the later excited about bad roads.

Lumber prices have been slightly reduced, it is said; but not sufficiently to materially decrease the cost of constructing hen coops.

With two editors contending for white house honors it looks as if residential messages of the future will be more like editorials.

"Back to the farm" is all right in its way; but when the fellow on the farm thinks he can do better in town he comes to town.

THE DRY LAW AND PRESIDENTS.

Because the republicans and democrats failed to put in a plank endorsing the eighteenth amendment the prohibition party will nominate a presidential ticket in its national convention at Lincoln, Nebraska, according to Virgil Hinshaw, chairman of the national prohibition committee.

Nebraska is the home of Wm. J. Bryan and Lincoln is the city in which Bryan's paper, the Commoner, is published. Thus once more we see the fine Italian hand of the man who was last week repudiated by his fellow-democrats at San Francisco because he wanted them to meddle in something which in the light of the most liberal interpretation could not be construed as a party issue.

Exactly what difference it will make to the prohibition law as to whether a president is personally wet or dry is not clear. The 18th amendment is a part of the fundamental law of the land and cannot be repealed, modified or amended without a two-thirds vote of the legislative bodies of the 48 states of the union. The 18th amendment prohibits the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors.

The Volstead act is a creature of congress, and limits the amount of alcohol in beverages to one-half of one per cent. The amount of alcohol allowed could be raised by congressional action only, and any amendment increasing the per centage of alcohol in beverages would have to come through congress. It would appear to any sensible man that a president would have very little, if anything, to do with modifying the national prohibition law.

It is a foregone conclusion that the wets will attempt to elect wet congressmen. That is the first move, and is more important to prohibitionists than whether the president is "wet" or "dry." Virtually all congressmen from the south will be "dry;" they are that way now and will unquestionably stay that way. Most congressmen from the middle and western states will remain dry. The only hope of the "wets," regardless of who is elected president, is in the east and north where sentiment favors a modification of the Volstead act so as to permit the sale of light wines and beer.

But back of all the agitation at the San Francisco convention and back of this latest move to nominate a prohibition presidential ticket is the consuming ambition of Mr. Bryan to be president. He doesn't of course, stand a ghost of a show, but it would take a miracle man to make him see it that way.

It is a pity the prohibition party does not let well enough alone. They got what they asked for and they should be satisfied. To continue to "rub it in" by keeping up a campaign of agitation is calculated to do the party considerable harm. There is danger of a reaction.

TURNER BROS., Managers

FOR THE SALE OF LEAF TOBACCO Nichols, S. C.

This company is owned and controlled entirely by tobacco farmers. A. M. Turner will run the sales and manage the business on the floor and J. S. Turner the office side. Their record speaks louder than words. They have with them this year the famous auctioneer, A. E. Pettigrew, who is known to be one of the best auctioneers in the old belt. This company is now building some new prize rooms for the convenience of their increased corps of buyers, which will greatly help them in making more room for sales floor space. They solicit your patronage and promise in return the highest average, and quick and polite service.
