

McLendon Stirs Up Big Audience at Spencer.

Spencer, Sept. 12—Rev. B. F. McLendon, familiarly known as "Cyclone Mack", who is conducting a revival here in a tent, preached Sunday morning in Greensboro, occupying the pulpit of the Park Place Methodist Episcopal church.

The famous evangelist arrived here from Greensboro at 3:35 p. m., five minutes after the time set for his afternoon service in the big tent, near the baseball diamond. James Penny, of Greensboro, brought him here in an automobile.

Mr. McLendon went from the machine directly to his place in the tent, where a sea of faces greeted him. Some of the auditors had arrived as much as an hour ahead of time in order to get seats. Hundreds upon hundreds were comfortably seated inside the tent, while many stood on the outside in order to catch a few words from the lips of the preacher.

After the choir of about 200 Spencer people had rendered several selections, Cyclone Mack went into action. It required him but a few minutes to lay aside his big sombrero, remove his white collar, coat and vest—in fact he was stripped for ring duty. And he handled himself in great style. It was a big day under the old tent.

Mr. McLendon since coming here a week or so ago has preached the gospel of Jesus Christ to thousands of souls. The town in the afternoon was a veritable automobile park in the vicinity of the tent meeting. Riding from Spencer to Salisbury one was impressed with the steady stream of automobiles carrying people to the revival.

Not only are the people of Spencer and the vicinity attending these big meetings, but those who have heard the preacher in other sections of the state travel for miles and miles to listen again to his inspiring, soul-stirring messages.

If crowds are indexes to success, then the Spencer meeting is a whaling success, and the influence of the South Carolina evangelist continues on its heavenly tramp.

FLOOD VICTIMS OVER 100 MARK

Decomposed Bodies Found in Many Places.

San Antonio, Sept. 12—More than 100 bodies of flood and storm victims in the lowlands along the San Gabriel river in Williamson and Milan counties have been recovered, according to the correspondent of the San Antonio Express at Taylor, who telegraphed a report tonight.

The correspondent telephoned the following: "One hundred and nine bodies have been recovered from flooded lowlands along the San Gabriel river in Williamson and Milan counties. Most of the dead are Mexican farm laborers."

Another dispatch to the Express from Rochdale, Milan County, says: "More than twenty families in the Brazos bottoms between Cuase and Valley Junction are reported lost. Five persons are known to have been drowned on the Ede Green farm in the San Gabriel bottoms."

More than twenty feet of water rose over the roads in Brazos bottoms and nothing has been heard from the twenty families living there.

Property Loss. Property losses will exceed $1,000,000, the report said.

Conditions along the Brazos river between Rockdale and Hearne are unknown.

Ed Green, on whose land several were drowned, was rescued after being in a tree thirty-six hours. Two white boys and a girl were rescued at the same time.

Death lists from the different towns and communities reported here, follows:

Thorndale, 65 bodies recovered, all Mexicans.

Lanepool—23 bodies recovered, all Mexicans.

Alligator Creek—5 Mexicans.

Roy Bland farm near Taylor—4 Mexicans.

Mim Grove—29 Mexicans on Jake Bowers' place, seven miles southeast of Taylor.

Americans whose bodies have been recovered are two unidentified children, drowned in Brussey Creek near Taylor, Mrs. H. L. Brown and son Lee at Redville Gin on Alligator creek.

"MILLIONAIRE" IN PERIL.

Confidence Game is Well Played in Old London.

(London Cable in New York Morning Telegraph.)

A Londoner may walk safely about the streets at any hour of the 24, unafraid of holdup men, but if he meets, perhaps in an exclusive West End hotel or night club, a "South African millionaire," he will be well advised to hold his money with both hands and leave the place.

Every few days some disillusioned man, who until a short time before had more money than was good for him, gets up in court and begins: "Well, I was at Blank's and was introduced to a Mr. Blank, a South African—perhaps anything else—millionaire."

Blank's new country place and wined and dined for weeks. Sooner or later, of course, he bet on a three-legged horse with a bookmaker the other boys knew; perhaps there were some friendly games in which everybody lost heavily except one man.

"CAN'T BEAT THE WEEVIL," SAYS GEORGIAN.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Boswell, Jr., of Siloam, Ga., spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Braddy. Mr. Braddy visited Mr. Boswell at his Georgia home several weeks ago and spent several days looking over Mr. Boswell's cattle farm. He bought several fine cows from Mr. Boswell.

"You can't beat the boll weevil," remarked Mr. Boswell to a Herald representative, "and the man who tries it is going to come out at the little end of the horn," continued Mr. Boswell. "All his life my father had been wedded to cotton. He owned quite a number of acres of good cotton land. He knew how to farm and he believed till the last that he could beat the boll weevil. About 20 years ago I began to go back and forth from Georgia to Texas buying cattle. On each trip I saw that the boll weevil was slowly but steadily making his way towards Georgia. There was Texas, then Oklahoma, then Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, then Georgia. The Georgians, like the Texans, the Mississippians, the Louisianians and the Alabamians, thought they could beat the boll weevil, but they found out they were mistaken. The only thing that saved me and my father were those trips I made back and forth to Texas buying cattle. Every time I made a trip I became more and more convinced that our day was coming, and each year I persuaded my father to plant less and less cotton and raise more cows and hogs. By the time the boll weevil hit us we had reduced our acreage to the extent that we scarcely felt it. Our neighbors, many of whom were large farmers, continued to plant cotton and many of them went bankrupt. I know of one large planter who has something like 600 acres in cotton this year from which he will gather about 20 bales. He is a man of ample means and he used every device money could buy to fight the boll weevil. He planted cotton in wide rows and sprayed it regularly, yet the weevil got him. In addition to raising cattle we make syrup, peanuts and other food crops. Labor is plentiful and we keep a standing offer of 50 cents a day to any man who wants to go to work. We don't care how many men apply for a job—we will find something for them to do. The offer holds good the year round. We adopted this rule because there was actual suffering and 50 cents a day will keep a person from starving."

Mr. Boswell has made a success of the cattle business. He made arrangements while here to ship in a car load of fine cattle during fair week which he says he is going to sell to the people of Dillon county at mighty close prices. He says he knows it is just a question of time before they will be looking for a place to buy breed cattle and he wants to get in on the ground floor. Mr. Boswell also had with him samples of some fine cane syrup and placed several barrels with Dillon merchants.

WHEN COTTON WAS STABLE.

Pee Dee Advocate. The price of cotton on the New York exchange often fluctuates more in a day now than in a year back in the 80's and 90's. The fluctuation was less than one cent during the whole of the year 1886, the highest price for the year being 9 9-16 and the lowest 8 13-16.

The difference between the highest and the lowest price during the twenty years beginning Jan. 1, 1883, and ending Jan. 1, 1903, was less than seven and a half cents; the highest being 12 3-3 in 1890, and the lowest 5 5-16 in 1898.

The variation was only four and three-quarter cents during the nine years beginning Jan. 1, 1891. It has varied more than that in a week both this fall and last fall.

The greatest fluctuation in any year was $1.18 a pound in 1864, when the highest was 190 and the lowest 72 cents a pound.

We Must Have Elevators.

"It is easy enough to raise all kinds grain crops in Dillon county and raise them in abundance," said Mr. L. Cottingham, general manager of the Dillon County Warehouse and Marketing Association, "but the great problem that confronts our people is how to market them. It will be a waste of time and energy and money to raise a big corn and oat crop in the county and let it spoil on our hands and that is what will happen if we do not erect grain elevators. The trade does not want weevil eaten and bug damaged corn at any price, and even though we offered local manufacturers our corn at half the price at which they could get western corn delivered they would continue to buy the western corn and you could not blame them. I am investigating the grain elevator. I am convinced that it is the only solution of the problem, if we go in strong for corn and oats next year. An elevator that will take care of 300,000 bushels of corn will cost about $50,000. Two or three elevators of that capacity will take care of the corn crop in Dillon county. Now is the time for us to get busy along this line. It will be financial suicide to raise a big corn crop and then not be able to market it."

Ginning! Ginning!!
ATTENTION FARMERS:
We are now ready to gin your cotton at our Dillon and Little Rock ginneries. We have recently put in new machinery at both gins. This machinery is the latest and most up to date on the market, and we extend to you a cordial invitation to call and inspect our plants. Our New Gins are of the HULLER type, and a little later in the season when cotton becomes trashy and dirty it will be possible to make sample that will grade Middling on these gins out of cotton that would not grade middling if ginned on the Plain Breast Type of gins. We make no extra charge to our regular customers for the services of the HULLER GINS.
We ask that you ask any cotton buyer about the grade of ginning that we are doing.
We solicit your business and guarantee you satisfaction.
