FATAL CRASH OF TRAIN INTO WAGON NEAR GAFFNEY.

Mr. S. W. Wyatt Lost His Life, One Son Fatally Hurt and Another Slightly Hurt.

A most distressing accident occurred at Beaver Dam Church, three miles south of Gaffney, Monday, when No. 37, the Southern's vestibule limited, ran into a team of mules and wagon at the railway crossing, near the church. The wagon was occupied by S. W. Wyatt and his two sons, Hamlet and Luther. The father was killed instantly, Luther, the eldest son, was fatally injured, and the other boy was only slightly hurt. Both mules were killed and the wagon was torn into kindling wood. Both of the boys were taken into Spartanburg on the train and an inquest is being held over the dead man.

The crossing where the accident occurred is near an abrupt curve, where the engineer could not possibly see any distance in front of his train. It is said by some that the engineer did not whistle nor ring the bell for the crossing. Fragments of the mules were carried a distance of five hundred yards. Wyatt was an industrious and hard-working man and leaves a large family.

Luther was then taken to the hospital at Spartanburg Monday immediately after the fearful accident. He went to sleep at 8 o'clock and was perfectly conscious at the time. He is 30 years of age. His injuries are as follows: Three broken ribs, upper teeth knocked out, skull fractured in three places, lower lip cut off and is supposed to be internally injured. Physicians do not believe there is any hope for him.

Saturday night, after a long rain storm, he left his home and wandered off to some unknown place.

Sunday he spent the day with Mr. John Busbee, who lives several miles from Mr. Fulmer, and towards night he complained of feeling bad. Saying that he was going to the home of another of his neighbors, he left the house alone, and until found dead, was not heard of again.

Monday morning, some one going to Mr. Busbee's shed to feed, found Mr. Fulmer hanging over the rear of the buggy with a driving rein looped around his neck. Judging from the surroundings he had run the line over the rafter above, looped it around his neck and jumped off.

Mr. Fulmer was somewhat feeble-minded and had at one time been an inmate of the State Hospital at Columbia. His family is a prominent one in that section and they have the sympathy of many friends.

He Was A Bank Cashier and Had Stolen One Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Ending the police of several cities and private detectives for more than two months, J. Howard Lowery, alias James H. Johnson, wanted in Utica, N. Y., on a charge of embezzling more than $100,000 from the Utica City National Bank, was betrayed into the hands of a detective at Philadelphia by a woman and taken to New York state before the local authorities were aware of what was going on. His arrest is the reward of patience and perseverance on the part of Daniel J. Kelleher, a detective of the New York office of the American Bankers' Association. Lowery was a note teller in the bank and disappeared last April while an examiner was going over the bank's books.

Kelleher, after a long time, got a clue which left to several cities and then to Wilmington, Del. He learned that a woman was in correspondence with the former teller and he spent many days in Wilmington before he learned her address and then kept tabs on her for nearly a week before his vigil was rewarded. On Tuesday night as he was standing in an alley near the woman's house, he noticed her leave with a suit case in her hands. He followed her to the railroad station and then into a train.

Confronting her with the information he had, he forced her to tell Lowery's address in the city. That done, he took the woman back to Wilmington, leaving a guard to see that she should not be able to communicate with Lowery.

Then he went to Philadelphia with another detective. They stationed themselves near a house on North 160th street, where the woman said Lowery was living, and were on guard about five hours, when the man they wanted came out. Stepping up to him, Kelleher told him he was under arrest. Lowery was stunned for a moment, but quickly recovered.

The dispatch says a young woman, 17 years old, said to be the daughter of a cotton planter near Cowpens, S. C., is detained in Richmond by the police and is under the care of the Associated Charities there, until such time as she is sent for by her parents or earns enough money to buy a ticket back to her home. She wishes to get back as soon as she can, according to her statements. The story the girl is alleged to have told is a pathetic one. According to the police, she went to Richmond in company with a man, whose name the authorities do not divulge. He was a stranger to the young country girl, and they met when on a train, and she was en route to her parent's home, from Spartanburg. She is alleged to have been lured away by smooth and false talk of he stranger. She says he proposed that she go to Richmond, and she followed him, after arriving living as his wife at a boarding house there.

The man left Friday night, telling the girl to come to Petersburg, but the landlady became suspicious and called in a policeman, and the girl was taken to the police station, where arrangements were made for her care. There is no charge against the girl, but the officers are searching for the man, who will be charged with an ugly offense when found. The girl is pretty and unsophisticated, and has evidently been imposed upon.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Clear spruce balm, obtainable at any drug store, dissolved in alcohol, makes a good varnish for pictures.

After writing a name on linen with indelible ink, to make it so washing will not run the color, press the writing with a warm iron. When this is done, the letters never blur.

To embroder an initial upon a pair of silk stockings, slip a glass egg into the stocking and draw the stocking firmly over it while outlining the letter. This gives a perfect outline.

You will find great improvement in a one-seam sleeve that is to fit snugly to the arm if you will slightly round the edge of the sleeve that comes over the elbow. This is not observed on the long sleeve that fits snugly to the arm, but it gives decided comfort to the arm at the elbow.

In making a stencil pattern, instead of weighting the material with irons to keep it perfectly straight, get a handful of button drawing pins, or tailor's pins, and fasten the material securely to a large board or upon the kitchen table. Put plenty of smooth papers beneath the material. Pin the pattern up on the goods, and you will have better success with the work.

Plate powder that will not scratch the finest polish on silver is made of whiting. Pour over the whiting enough water to dissolve it and add some ammonia. Let the sediment settle, pour off the water and let the whiting dry. When dry it can be applied to the smoothest silver and gold. It should be rubbed with a soft cambric or cotton cloth.

A pretty garnish can be made with the inner leaves of brussels sprouts. If the new fountain pen leaks around the joined ends put the screw end in melted candle grease join the two pieces and it will not leak.

If a muff is carried to the opera, thin white gloves should be slipped over the delicately tinted ones to keep them clean, for mud flings get badly soiled.

A small medicine bottle is useful for holding embroidery needles. Keep it in the work basket.

If one has a piece of roofing slate and will heat it in the oven, it can be placed under the bread pan and the winter bread will rise more quickly. Cover well to keep in the heat.

To make a good floor filler put one pint of broken glue in an old tin bucket and cover with one gallon of boiling water. Put the bucket into a second vessel of water and the glue will dissolve without burning. When it boils add enough sifted saw dust to make a good putty. Fill the floor cracks with this, smooth with steel wood scraper or thin-bladed case knife.

It is claimed a splendid ironing board cover is made by tacking bur-lap to the board, and then covering it with a double thickness of old white flannel. This makes a firm, smooth covering which never wrinkles like the blanket covering.

A leather bag of convenient size should be made to keep very fine pointed scissors in, for it not only protects the sharp ends but saves the hands.

When laundering starched articles in winter, always add borax to the starch and the cuffs will not lose shape.

A relish made of one can of pimientos, mixed with finely chopped celery, is well liked. It is covered with French dressing and served on lettuce leaves.

As an addition to jelly, take a handful of figs, wash them clean and plump them with tepid water. It takes a few hours to do this. Cover them with strawberry gelatine. The figs can be cut and mixed with broken nut kernels.

A woman who likes fads, yet does not care for the accumulation of odd bits of bric-a-brac, purchased a plain silver napkin ring which she takes with her on her travels, and at each city where she made an extended visit, she has the name of the city, date, etc., engraved up on the ring. It is getting full of names and is very artistic.

Save one or two turkey wings. They are the best brushes in the world to use around a stove, and they are splendid for sweeping closet shelves. Weight the wing tip with an iron until it dries.

When boots become badly soiled on the edges if not gilt edged, close the book tightly, then erase the marks with an ink eraser. This will cut off all rough edges, all soiled marks and leave the book very clean.

In making a glass card ornament if the cards get soiled with the hands or from mullage, you can dampen a white cloth and wipe off the surface of the card, leaving it perfectly clean. Do not rub the card, for the shiny surface is very thin, much like a veneer.

The cushioned back of a Morris chair has been found valuable in the sick room to place back of the invalid in bed.

To candy fruit for immediate use, make a syrup which will crackle in a glass of water. Dip each piece of fruit with a fork into the syrup, then drop into a plate of powdered sugar. Use a spoon to dip jelly fruit.

Buy a coarse blanket if you do not have one and keep it to place in the floor when the baby is playing here. But the iron on it and if it is necessary to quickly clean the room of toys, pick up the blanket.

A little dainty served on a dish of salad consisted of a small piece of cheese laid between two halves of an English walnut.

Removing Ink Stains.

It is a very easy matter to remove ink spots from white material, but many become discouraged because the first application of some reliable ink remover fails to bring good results. The finest material, such as mousseline, cambrie and longcloth, hold stains much longer than a cheaper fabric, for which reason it is necessary to apply stronger solutions. Pure household ammonia will remove ink from a handkerchief, table cover or any white article which does not contain silk or a color. Put the article in an earthen wash bowl, pour ammonia over the ink and leave it for 15 or 20 minutes; take it out of the bowl, wring out the ammonia, wipe the bowl and renew the process; then wash with lukewarm water. Peroxide of hydrogen, applied alternately with ammonia and dried in the sun, will remove very bad blemishes. Lemon juice can be applied to white silk, and should it be a silk with a blue mark, the lemon will not injure the color, but it would fade practically any other color than blue. A very thin white Paris mullin dress was splashed with the entire contents of an ink bottle, but the owner immediately put the dress into a crock of sour buttermilk and let it soak over night. While the blemishes were not entirely obliterated, and it was necessary to soak the dress in fresh buttermilk for several hours more, it finally came out pure and white and the entire dress bleached by the process. Ink marks on velvet carpet can be removed with warm skimmed milk. Scrub the carpet the same as with water and, when dry, wash the spot with benzine to remove the greasy appearance. Salt will absorb ink from a table cover and prevent it from spreading, but it is not a reliable agent for the removal of bad stains. Pure cider vinegar, oxalic acid, cream of tartar, a weak solution of muriatic acid or javelle water can be depended upon to remove all black ink stains. Ammonia will remove red ink stains, which should afterwards be treated with borax and then washed in a hot suds. When these powerful ink eradicators are used, it is absolutely necessary to thoroughly rinse the articles in several waters.

Making Coffee.

The secret of good coffee is an immaculately clean coffee pot, fresh boiling water and good material. It is better to pay a little more for your coffee and use less in quantity than would be necessary in the cheaper grades. The coffee pot should be thoroughly washed and scalded after every meal and coffee never allowed to stand in it. If it gets discolored, put a little baking soda in it once a week or so, fill with cold water and let it come to the boiling point. Take care that the spout and strainer are perfectly cleaned. Rinse and dry thoroughly. Unlike most cooking utensils, which do better work when their newness has worn off, a coffee pot is better when new, whether made of tin, granite, nickel or aluminum. Many good housekeepers advocate frequent renewals from the 10-cent store, discarding the old coffee pots as soon as they become discolored and strong. These are better in the end than the most expensive coffee percolator that is not kept immaculate. The time-honored rule for making coffee is a tablespoonful for each person and one for the pot. Put the coffee in the clean pot, pour in a few spoonfuls of cold water to wet it, add a clean, freshly broken egg shell if you have it, or a teaspoonful of the white of egg, pour on the boiling water and let it just come to the boil. Take away from the fire, give a second shake or stir the grounds down, then replace and let it come again just to the boil. Do this three times in succession, then push back on the stove to settle and clear. Some persons prefer to make the coffee by the cold-water method. In this case cover the coffee with the required amount of cold water, allow it to reach the boiling point, then proceed as before. The coffee must not be allowed to boil hard, but merely reach the boiling point each time. If not perfectly clear when ready to serve pour in a tablespoonful of cold water.

The Young Housekeeper.

The one reason why some young women do not learn to do their own cooking is because they consider it beneath the dignity of a lady to do so. It is a very foolish thought and, even if it were true, it would be very uncomplimentary to real ladies who prefer the management of their own culinary apartments. We know that most women of great means employ cooks, because their social position demands a great deal of their time, but it is a well known fact that many women in the wealthiest families make their own cakes, sauces, puddings and the fancy dishes which grace the tables at their most elaborate buffet functions. There is nothing degrading in the work; in fact, it is a discredit to the woman who says she can not prepare a meal; it may never be necessary for a woman to do her own kitchen work, but it is advisable that she should know the rudiments of the art, for if a woman is left without a maid, the man of the house must become a modern Robinson Crusoe in his own home and prepare his own meals or take the family to a restaurant.
