Nobody has pointed out the difficulty of Mr. Bryan's present position more clearly than Mr. R. L. Metcalfe, former editor of The Commoner and for many years a close personal friend and political adherent of the Nebraskan. Mr. Metcalfe thinks that "at last Mr. Bryan is practically out of the Democratic party." In his judgement, based upon first-hand observations in several States which he has lately visited, Mr. Bryan's stock is now "lower than at any time in his history." This does not mean, Mr. Metcalfe hastens to add, "that anyone imagines that he will be without political influence. But in an international controversy there is only one leader for Americans, and that is the President of their country. In this instance there is such a widespread confidence in the President that no one can ever seem to contend with him and win public favor."

ATLANTA MOB THREATENS GOVERNOR OR SLATON

Militia Called out When News Learned—Frank Begins Sentence.

Governor Slaton of Georgia announced Monday morning at 8:30 that he had commuted the sentence of Leo M. Frank from death to life imprisonment. Frank was sentenced for the murder of Mary Phagan. Soon after the news of the commutation had been announced a mob began forming and threatened the governor. The Governor and Frank were hanged in effigy at Newman and guards were increased at the penitentiary where Frank began his sentence as convict No. 965. An Atlanta special says

"With several hundred men and boys clamoring to enter his front gates, which had been barricaded and threatening to overpower 20 county policemen, Governor Slaton called upon the militia late tonight to protect his home. Upon arrival of four companies of militia who had been held under arms and rushed to the Governor's country home in auto. biles, he proclaimed martial law in a district extending half mile back and for a distance of about a quarter of a mile on either side.

When the soldiers lined up with fixed bayonets to disperse the crowd, stones, brick and bottles were thrown at them. Abriek struck Lieut. Arnold Parker and rendered him unconscious for a short time. The commanding officer, Major Catron, was struck by a stone as were several of the men.

The Governor was surrounded in his home by a dozen of his friends, nearly every one of whom was armed with a rifle or pistol. The unexpected arrival of a member of the mob at a dark corner of the front porch caused the governor "himself to hastily pick up a large pistol.

In front of the Governor's house were more than 100 auto biles filled with persons evidently there to see what the crowd would do. The troops had great difficulty in clearing the road of these machines and many of their orders were met with the retort of "shot."

Mr. Joseph V. Funderburk, of Kingwood, W. Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. He has decided to locate here for the practice of his profession, which is civil engineering. He was educated at Lebanon Valley college and at the University of W. Va., and has had about 6 year experience.

Mr. Clyde Lowry, of Jefferson, and Miss Sallie Gregory, of the Charlesboro section of Lancaster county, were married by Rev. J. R. Caston at the bride's home last Wednesday evening at 9:30 o'clock. Mrs. Lowry is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory and is very popular. Mr. Lowry is a son of the late John Lowry and is a successful young man. They left soon after the ceremony for a trip to Columbia, Isle of Palms and other places.—Pageland Journal.

Mrs. Flora G. Miller, of Jefferson, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Charlotte J. to Mr. B. H. Jameson, of Fulton, Mo., the wedding to take place in the fall.

The engagement of Mr. Henry Lowry, of Jefferson, and Miss Eucinda Bedenbaugh of Darlington, has been announced, the wedding to take place some time in July. Miss Bedenbaugh is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. L. I. Bedenbaugh, formerly of this county. The Live Stock Department of the Southern Railway has issued a booklet telling how the average farmer at an expense of only $65 can construct a silo with a capacity of 55 tons enough silage to feed 20 cows 40 pound per day for four months.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Prester spent Sunday in Pageland.

A meeting of the county Sunday Association was held in this city Sunday afternoon, and Mr. L. A. Kerr was elected President to succeed Mr. W. C. Ellis, who resigned when he moved to Columbia several weeks ago. Another meeting will be held at Chesterfield in the near future.

TAKING THEIR TIME

By CLARENCE LYONS.

The woman with the purple straw hat spread her skirt a little more widely, so that nobody could take the seat next to her in the street car, and then resumed conversation.

"Some women are so queer," she said to her friend with the orange feathers, which stood up at least a foot above her hat. "I could use stronger language than that, but I am of a charitable nature and always willing to give people a chance. However, that woman at the milliner's was the limit!

"I always go to Miss Cretonne for my hats because she has style and is cheaper than anyone else. She hasn't a shop, you know, but does hats at home. So I dropped in on my way to the Ladies' Aid meeting and expected to be through in a jiffy. Somebody was in Miss Cretonne's office, so she left me down outside in the hall and said she'd be ready for me in a short time.

"The minute I heard the voice of the creature who was in there, I knew what to expect. It was sort of drawly and undecided, and it had an edge on it that meant, 'I know you're waiting out there, but I got here first and I'm going to take precisely as long as I like!'

"Well, she made Miss Cretonne bring in, one by one, every hat she had in her sewing-room, and she didn't like any of them. One was too little and another was too big. Finally she decided that she didn't want a black straw, anyhow. She said if Miss Cretonne was really up to date she'd have straws in the new Bulgarian colors, and, anyway, what she was interested in was getting her old ecru straw re-trimmed. No, she didn't want ribbon, and as for flowers, they were impossible.

"Would Miss Cretonne please step across the room and hold up the hat with that bunch of flowers pinned on? Couldn't she see it just killed the hat? Why, her cousin had just got back from New York, and she said nobody there would be caught dead with flowers on her hat. No, she wouldn't have the new Numdl feathers. She was sure they got those feathers off the heron or the robins at the nesting season, and, anyhow, if they were only ostrich, as Miss Cretonne said, it was painful to the birds when they were plucked. Hats were an awful trial, she said. Wouldn't it be lovely if it were the style not to wear any hats at all?

"Here I coughed to remind the woman that I was on earth. That caused her to fall Miss Cretonne that it was perfectly dreadful how much pneumonia there was around this season and that her brother's wife out in Idaho nearly died with pneumonia last month.

"You think you don't want feathers, then?" Miss Cretonne broke in nervously.

"Perish the thought! She never could bear feathers since she went to a funeral and sat behind a hat with sixteen ostrich plumes on it. Maybe it was only fifteen, but they looked like twenty. What did Miss Cretonne think of a plum color straw to wear with a green suit? Something a little bit different, wasn't it? The woman across the street from her had a plum hat last year and she always had been crazy about it.

"Here I coughed again to convey delicately my conviction that if she wasn't crazy she was at least feeble-minded. Then she rather thought she might like a black hat, after all, and wished Miss Cretonne to get some shapes from the wholesale house. No, she hadn't any idea what shape she wanted—just something pretty and stylish and cheap and awfully good looking. She would dearly love some Bulgarian embroidery on it, but it was so loud. She was afraid it would get common.

"Mercy, wasn't it a warm day! Really, she must send her fur coat down to storage. And whatever Miss Cretonne did she should never, never buy a fur of the man who had sold that coat. Look how it had worn!" "I coughed again and tapped my feet on the floor. At this she settled down more comfortably and sighed. She was certain spring hats were going to be the end of her. She did wish that Miss Cretonne would decide on some way to trim the ecru hat. Goodness, how her head ached!

"It was fifty-five minutes by my watch before she came out of that office and she certainly looked her part—selfish, unaccommodating, inconsiderate, fat thing! I was so mad I just flew into the office!

"I suppose you got through in time for the ladies' aid, anyhow," said the woman with the orange feathers. "You're always so quick!"
