One week till the fair begins.

The Roswell car has started on its journey.

The Methodist conference convenes to-morrow.

Congress will not meet in special session until November.

Statehood is again claiming its share of space in the newspapers of New Mexico.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, has trouble before him. The W. C. T. U. wish him expelled.

People along the Santa Fe Central are urging that the mail be at once established on that road.

New Mexico in a few short years will rival Pennsylvania as a coal producer, but Pennsylvania will always rival New Mexico as a cold producer.

Roswell is again short on advertising literature. The newspaper and real estate offices are already noticing an increase in the letters of inquiry as winter approaches. More good literature is needed.

The New Mexican of Saturday last gives five and a half columns to a write-up of Roswell—the Gem City of the Pecos Valley. The article is illustrated by four half tones showing the luxuriant growth of alfalfa, the irrigation ditches and the live stock industry. The article will do much good as an advertisement for Roswell and Chaves county.

Two Young Giants.

Our Washington correspondent predicts that in the coming session of the U. S. Senate the two Texas senators will take the first rank in debate. He says:

"The intention of the republicans to force the 'rubber and dark lantern currency' issue in the Senate next winter is going to precipitate the warmest tariff debate that has been heard in the halls of the Congress since the days of the Mills bill, back in 1888. The republican leaders in the Senate are going to have their match as in that body when the debate is opened, and they will come from the younger element of that body. Of all the young Murats of debate in the Senate the state of Texas stands at the head as the best equipped state in the Union in that regard. It is undoubtedly, from the standpoint of democracy, the ablest represented state in the entire country in the person of the Hon. Charles A. Culberson and the Hon. Joseph W. Bailey. They are both under forty-five years of age and both have achieved notable distinction in the political arena. Both have had remarkable careers. They have attained their present position through sheer force of intellect and exquisite fitness for the position, and not through the power of money, as have the majority of the men of the republican side of the Senate. Those two men will take commanding positions in the coming debate for the reason that their democracy is on straight and they have the brains to back their reputations as democrats. The so-called leader of the Senate, Mr. Gorman, will not shine in this debate, for the very good reason that his tariff coat has rents and holes in it that will be plainly visible to the naked eye when such men as Aldrich and Spooner get on his trail. His tariff record has blow holes in it and he will be compelled to take a back seat."

The real leaders in the next session of the Senate will be Culberson and Bailey, of Texas; Carmack of Tennessee; Patterson of Colorado, and Money of Mississippi. There is no better equipped man in the Senate than Culberson. He is essentially a lawyer, and it is the question of the law and the Constitution he prefers, but he is perfectly at home in a tariff debate. This is his first experience as a legislator, and he has not been as ready to jump into the arena of debate as has his distinguished and brilliant colleague, Mr. Bailey, who had ten years experience in the House before he came to the Senate. Senator Culberson's past experience in public life has been confined to the executive department of governmental affairs as the Attorney-General of Texas and Governor of the same state. He was twice nominated and elected Attorney-General, and twice nominated and elected Governor, and elected, without opposition, to the United States Senate as a tribute to his brilliant record in the former offices he had held. As Attorney-General of his state he defended the state's rights in a suit before the United States Supreme Court, involving the validity of the title of Greer county, Texas, and his speech in the case before the Supreme Court was so brilliant that it called forth the encomiums of the most distinguished men of the bar in the country. Chief Justice Fuller told Col. D. B. Culberson, the father of the brilliant young Attorney-General, that it was the finest argument he had ever listened to in all his experience at the bar, and praise from "Sir Hubert" was indeed. His two terms as governor of Texas reached the high-water mark of statesmanship and unanimous election to the Senate was a foregone conclusion. He is easily the leader of his state, a state of strong and virile men, and can stay in the Senate as long as he desires, and with little or no opposition. His colleague, Mr. Bailey easily takes rank as one of the best debaters in the entire Congress of the nation. His specialty is the tariff, having been on the Ways and Means Committee of the House for ten years, and in defending constitutional points.

His brilliant fight in the Senate during the long session of the last Congress to compel the President of the Senate to restore the names of Senators Tillman and McLaughlin, of South Carolina, to the rolls of the Senate, from which they had been stricken after their first fight on the floor of the Senate, was the finest personal triumph ever seen in the Senate, as was so designated by Senator Foraker, one of his chief and one of his ablest opponents. Look out for these two young giants in the next Congress.

AS Usual.

R. C. Noell of Wichita, Kansas, and Judge Z. S. Collins of Smithville, Mo., it yesterday afternoon for Artesian company with Ed Clayton to investigate real estate at that place they have been in different parts of the territory in the last two weeks and are greatly impressed with our future. They are unanimous in saying that Roswell is the finest town in the territory.

A Sad Message.

Robert Hurst, who has been employed with Prager & Fort, the grocers, for several months, had just finished reading a letter from his father yesterday at noon, when he received a message by wire that his father was dead. The message came as a great shock, as he was in good health. Mr. Hurst left this morning for Sedalia, Kansas, his old home. He is a relative of Mrs. R. O. Bollman and came here as a health seeker and has been much benefited by the change.

Postoffice Inspector Resigned.

Charles L. Doran, who has been postoffice inspector in New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, has resigned the position. He has many friends here who regret his action. Many thought he was an enemy of J. E. Mathews, our postmaster, but they were mistaken as he is a warm friend and no one regrets his resignation more than Mr. Mathews.

Mr. Doran was a thorough, business-like inspector and his place will be taken by a good man to come up to the requirements.

A FLIGHT FROM RUSSIA.

What Tennyson's Father Knew About Emperor Paul's Assassination.

Shortly after the assassination of Emperor Paul of Russia Tennyson, the father of the poet, dined with Lord St. Helens, the British ambassador, in Moscow. Several Russian officers of high rank whose names he did not know were also guests. During dinner a guarded reference was made to the emperor's death. "Why do you speak so gingerly about a matter so notorious?" cried Tennyson impulsively, leaning across his neighbor, a Russian whose breast was covered with orders. "We know very well in England that the Emperor Paul was murdered. Count Zoffo knocked him down, and Benningsen and Count Pahlen strangled him." There was a strained silence; then the ambassador abruptly changed the subject. As the guests fled out into an adjoining room Lord St. Helens drew Tennyson aside. "Don't go into the next room," he whispered, "but fly for your life. The man next you, across whose breast you leaned, was Count Pahlen, and Zoffo was also at the table." He gave a few hurried directions, and Tennyson rushed off, threw his clothes into a portmanteau and fled behind fast horses to Odessa, still in evening garb, though the cold was intense. He lay hidden for weeks and at last, in the disguise of a servant, was smuggled on board an English frigate.

A Kind Action.

When you rise in the morning form a resolution to make the day a happy one to a fellow creature, says Sydney Smith. It is easily done—a left off garment to the man who needs it, a kind word to the sorrowful, an encouraging expression to the striving. Trifles in themselves as light as air will do it, at least for the twenty-four hours, and if you are young depend upon it it will tell when you are old, and if you are old it will send you gently and happily down the stream of time to eternity. By the most simple arithmetical sum look at the result—you send one person, only one, happily through the day; that is 365 during the course of the year. And suppose you live only forty years after you commence that kind of medicine you have made 14,600 beings happy, at all events for a time. Now, is not this simple? It is too short for a sermon, too homely for ethics, too easily accomplished for you to say, "I would if I could."

Forests and Human Vitality.

One has but to look back through history to see how closely related is the forest to human vitality. It was in the forests of Thessaly that the early Greeks received their energy that later flowed into genius. It was the forest dwellers of Germany that conquered decadent Rome and later gave to Spain the vigor that swept back the Moor and brought under her flag almost the whole known world. But today what is Greece, what is Italy, what is Spain? They have been stripped of their forests, those nurseries of vigor, and their decay has set in. Everywhere the law holds good. It is in the forest that the manhood is nourished which builds up great civilizations. But cities arise, trees are swept away, and the inevitable decline sets in. Forests once destroyed cannot return, and over all the sites of ancient civilization are blowing the desert sands.—Arthur Goddard in New York Times.

Servants in Sofia.

"Twice a year, on April 23 and Oct. 26," writes a young Bulgarian woman living in Sofia, "our streets are full of servants, and people bargain with them for service. During the winter season they are very cheap, as the peasants send all their girls to the city to be hired, they having no work for them at home. The price paid differs. One can get a girl for her board, or pay up to 20 lusor ($4) a month for one who cooks, washes and irons. Girls are often thankful to enter a good family for their board. For the men there is very little work, and the papers are full of suicides on account, during the dull seasons of starvation."

The Candlefish of Puget Sound.

Very queer fish are caught in the waters of Puget sound. One kind is called the candlefish. It is dried and packed in boxes like candles. We are told the fishermen use them to light their homes and that at one time all the boats on the sound used them instead of sperm oil lamps. By putting the heads of the fish downward in a candlestick and lighting the tail, which, in conjunction with the backbone, acts as a wick, it burns like a candle. They eat this fish, and when cooking it is so fat it fries itself.

An Ancient Work on Angling.

The greatest work of antiquity on angling is said to be the "Halieutica" of Oppian, a Greek poet who flourished in the time of Severus, A. D. 198, from which we learn that many artifices in fishing thought to be modern were known to ancients. We also learn from Athenaeus that several other writers had written treatises or poems on fishing some centuries before the Christian era.

His "Turnout."

Clerkley—Isn't this earlier than your usual time for going home?
Barkley—Yes, but my wife said if I came out by the 3:45 she'd meet me with the carriage.
"I didn't know you kept a horse and carriage."
"Er—er—it's a baby and carriage."

Explicit.

Van Quizz—Where does young Chipston work?
Fitz-Bille—In a wholesale grocery concern.
Van Quizz—I know, but for whom?
Fitz-Bille—Oh, for a gambling house.
