

The Summit Of Style.

Is attained in the new fall Suits and Overcoats bearing this famous mark. Alfred Benjamin & Co. Makers, New York. The single-breasted sack suit has 4 button coat with narrow lapels; the double breasted, 3 buttons with long wide lapels; both have broad, concave shoulders, hand padded; close fitting collars, hand felled; hand-worked button-holes, and are hand-shaped and hand-tailored in the most approved custom way. The extreme military cut of former seasons evolves this season into the semi-military style—more graceful and less radical. American adaptations of the world-renowned Pool fashion of London, are also much in vogue this autumn. The exclusiveness apparent in a very fall styles is also strikingly noticeable in the perfection of fit, quality of fabric and skill of workmanship. Yet Benjamin Apparel, with all its superiorities costs little if anything more than ordinary ready mades. We are exclusive distributors in this city. Everything ready to wear for ladies men and children.

Hard to Beat a Man

At His Own Game.

As a rule the Chinamen spend all of their money on the faro bank gambling game, but last night several of them attended the Norris & Rowe show. Gambling is a vicious habit, but otherwise the money of the Chinaman would not get into circulation as they are as close as the bark on a tree. In the faro bank game they are plungers and it is a case of win or lose, and generally lose, as the old saying is true, "It is hard to beat a man at his own game."

A Brother of Frank Brown.

C. S. Brown of Oklahoma City, who has been here for a few days left on last evening's train for Artesia. Hard to Kill Them.

While loading the big wagons on the Norris & Rowe show train last night one of the workmen was thrown about ten feet. The tongue of one of the big wagons suddenly turned on the car and threw the man head over heels. He landed on his head, but as usual he was not injured and returned to his work in a few minutes. The crowd that follows and goes with tented shows as helpers are the scum of creation and it is hard to kill or even injure them.
