When in doubt, mind your own business.

The outcome of the battle is of no importance—but how did you fight.—Elbert Hubbard.

Probably the cheapest life insurance for the traveling public would be sleeping car tickets.

For a young person, the safest temper is one of reverence, and the safest place one of obscurity.—Ruskin.

Booker T. Washington doesn't believe in whining about President Roosevelt's treatment of the negro troops.

Nothing short of shooting out the headlight would seem to serve as a signal to stop a train that is headed toward a wreck.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "Nobody seems to be running against Senator Bailey in Texas, except the people."

The New Mexican is getting nervous over the proposition to establish a Democratic news bureau at Santa Fe during the session of the legislature.

"I have a theory that all three eloquence comes from tails in the coat, and if ye made an orator change into a short coat he would become deaf as a dumb.—Dooley.

Simonides confessed himself incapable of deceiving stupid persons. Dulness is impetrable; and there are hours when the liveliest taste loses its sensibility.—D'Israeli.

Rev. John W. Smith, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, will discuss the "Negro Problem" in his sermon Sunday night. In the midst of the political discussion it is well to pause once in awhile and consider what God would have us do.

Alarm is felt in the wheat belt because of the warm, springlike days followed by freezing weather. Another theory is that the only way to kill the Kansas wheat crop is to pull it up by the roots and beat it to death with a club.—Kansas City Times.

Somebody has put up a job on the "Parson" by advertising that he will speak at the union temperance meeting Sunday afternoon. He had promised, conditionally, to take part in a meeting to discuss the matter of prohibiting gambling in the Territory. He is a Democrat and does not believe in prohibition by law. He believes in total abstinence, but would leave the decision to each individual for himself. He may be wrong in this position, but does not care to argue the matter.

GEN. ROBERT E. LEE.
One hundred years ago today was born Robert E. Lee, who won victory in defeat, the hero so respected by his victorious opponent, General Grant, that he was allowed to retain his sword in surrender, because Grant considered no other man worthy to bear it. Both Lee and Grant were trained at West Point, and both served in the Mexican war, Grant as a captain and Lee as chief engineer. At the close of this war it is said that Lee was recognized as a fitting successor of General Scott whenever the latter should retire from the head of the army. But for the Civil war, the careers of Lee and Grant would have been written in the records of the same army. However, the war broke out, and in a letter Lee wrote:

"The whole South is in a state of revolution, into which Virginia, after a long struggle has been drawn; and though I recognize no necessity for this state of things, and would have forborne and pleaded to the end for redress of grievances, real or supposed, yet in my own person I had to meet the question whether I would take part against my native state. With all my devotion to the Union, and the feeling of loyalty and duty of an American citizen, I have not been able to make up my mind to raise my hand against my relatives, my children and my home."

History says that during the first year of the war Lee was kept in the background; but on his appointment as commander in chief, in 1862, new life was infused into the armies under him, and that energy which never flagged to the bitter end began to make itself felt. Although outnumbered, he kept up the unequal fight for three years, and usually inflicted far heavier losses than he received. The war left him homeless and penniless, and he gladly accepted the presidency of "Washington and Lee University," at Lexington, Va., where after a useful life of five years he died in 1870. It is recorded that during these last years he used all his influence, in a quiet way, to remove the bitter sectional feelings induced by the war.
