CONSOLIDE. HE Rev. Dr. Manister looked up from his paper and his servant entered the library and with an impatient gesture took the card from the tray which was handed to him.

Although this was only Tuesday evening, he was writing his Sunday sermon on account of having to get it into the printer's hands so that it could be syndicated by the newspapers. The Rev. Dr. Manister was a popular preacher, and his fame, fanned judiciously by his advertising agent, had penetrated to the uttermost isles. He was a severe looking man, with a heavy cast of countenance, well-kept, so solemn and serious an office as that of devil-dier.

The whole frowning aspect of his countenance seemed, in fact, to be meant as a direct and deliberate menace to the evil one, announcing that here was a man who would stop at nothing till he had driven his sinister highness back to his own gloomy domains. Moreover, from the sensual mouth and coarse lips of the divine it was evident that a potent faith and a rigid self-restraint had long been needed to make him so persistent and deliberate an enemy of the devil.

The preacher held the card in his hand a minute, looking at it carefully, as if in some doubt concerning what he saw upon it. Then he dropped it on his desk and told the servant to show his caller in. There entered the room in response to this order a young girl some twenty years of age, fashionably attired and wonderfully beautiful. "Corisande! How is this?" exclaimed the preacher, rising to greet her. "I thought you were in Italy. Sit down, my child. This is a great surprise."

The charming vision seemed itself comfortably in an easy-chair, and two brown eyes, liquid with tenderness or emotion, beamed upon the minister. "You are looking very well, indeed, Corisande," he added, contemplating his vis-a-vis with a much less frowning visage than he had presented to the close-shoofed minister. "I feel as well as one could expect to do under the circumstances," answered the girl quietly.

The minister, who had turned his eyes downward, did not look at the speaker when she replied, and there was silence in the library for a few moments. Then he said, as if recovering the thread of his thoughts, after having wandered fretfully away from his subject: "And what do you intend to do now, Corisande?" "What?"

The answer was almost instantaneous and the tone was almost indescribable. A volume of emotion, calm and mature analysis and detail, could not have explained more decisively the secret of Corisande's life. The preacher recoiled as if stricken and a look of dazed horror and helplessness came into his face as he gazed questioningly into that of the girl, which had grown stony and rigid since she had spoken.

"Corisande" said the preacher beseechingly, "will you not be merciful to me?" A smile of scorn wreathed the lips of the beautiful girl, as she answered slowly and carefully: "There are some things which cannot be undone, Dr. Manister, and there is one of them. I would not have come to you now, but that I read one of your sermons the other day in a paper which found its way into my hands. It contained an uncharitable reference to such as we—"

STEWART AT IT AGAIN. The Nevada Senator Delays Work to Make Still Another Silver Talk. Washington, Nov. 2.—A resolution having been submitted to the senate providing for the publication of a pamphlet by an Australian authority on "The Future of Silver," Mr. Hill took occasion to rise at Senator Stewart as one who had declared that silver had no future.

Mr. Stewart replied that there was nothing in the few observations he had heretofore made to warrant such a conclusion and soon thereafter introduced a bill providing for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. Presently Mr. Hoar's bill for the relief of the flood-devastated people of South Carolina came up for consideration. Mr. Stewart took the floor to debate it and promptly began the repetition of one of his stock silver speeches. In consequence the day's work of the senate was hampered and delayed.

Stewart's bill prescribes the weight of silver coins which are to be issued upon the basis of 16 to 1. The holders of silver bullion can deposit it at the mint and receive in exchange silver dollars or treasury notes, to be redeemable in silver coin only, which is a change from the usual form which requires their redemption in either silver or gold.

The senate bill to grant the right of ways to the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern railway company through the Indian and Oklahoma territories was passed. PRENDERGAST ARRANGED. The Mayor Harrison Assassin Pleads Not Guilty—Hanged in Emery. CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Patrick Eugene Joseph Prendergast, the murderer of Mayor Harrison, was arraigned in Judge Harton's court to-day. The court room was crowded and, when the prisoner was led in by the janitor, the spectators jumped to their feet. The action terrified Prendergast and he crouched close to the officers. He could scarcely stand and had to be assisted to his seat.

When the indictment was read Prendergast responded nervously: "Not guilty." "Have you an attorney?" asked the judge. "No, but I expect to get one," responded the prisoner faintly. The judge then announced that the case would be continued to give Prendergast an opportunity to secure counsel, and the assassin was led trembling back to his cell. He had evidently intended to make a speech in the court room but his fear of mob violence reduced him to a state of abject terror and he seemed glad to get back to jail.
