The Man and the Label

With Apologies to Aesop

Copyright 1901. The Stern-Stock Co.

Once upon a time a man saw another man who was exceedingly well dressed. He thereupon determined to go to the same tailor. He looked for the label on the man's overcoat, as he passed through the hall, and this is the label he saw

Then after immediate inquiries for these tailors he found they were wholesale tailors, tailoring all garments ready-to-wear, and that there was a shop in town where he could apparel himself at a moment's notice, in clothes bearing the above label and at saving of many golden shekels; which he proceeded to do at once, and does so every season unto this day.

"And he lived happy ever after."
