THINK THIS OVER.

No need this weather to endure the wearisome journey to the mountains of Colorado when you can find but a few hours ride from home an almost ideal spot wherein to spend your vacation. Nature has been abundantly generous to Eureka Springs both in location and natural advantages and the appellation "The Gem of the Ozarks" is a most fitting one. Not only endowed with water whose health giving qualities have been endorsed by countless physicians and analysts of national repute; with pure and invigorating breezes, always cool and refreshing at night, with absence of flies and mosquitoes but the lovers of the wild and picturesque and those fond of outdoor sports of all kinds, will find here countless opportunities to gratify every longing.

The accommodations are first class in every respect and what is more, quite reasonable. The best of board and lodging can be had for from $5.00 to $7.00 per week. Are not these pointers worth a thought? Investigate and ascertain for your own satisfaction if what we recommend is not as represented.

The "Frisco Line" is the only direct route to Eureka Springs, Ark., and cheap rates are in effect all the year around. During the summer months we will have especially low rate excursions. Call on the nearest Frisco Line representative or write to either of the undersigned.

Theatrical Surge.
One night when one of Byron's big melodramas was being produced for the first time the playwright sat out in front among the critics. The first and second acts had been given, receiving such applause from the audience that the word "success" was stamped on the play from the start. The orchestra had finished the entr'act number, and two other selections besides, still the signal for the rise of the curtain on act 3 had not been given. People began to wonder at the long wait, and Byron was about to leave his friends and go back to ascertain the cause when the buzzing sound of a saw was heard from the other side of the footlights.

"What's that?" asked one of the party, addressing the anxious author. "I'm sure I don't know—unless they are cutting out the third act," was Byron's quick rejoinder.—The New York Clipper.

It was an Effective Pause.
The late Father Pettit was one of the best known priests in the Milwaukee diocese. It may be said that he was a fine representative of the pioneer priest. With a wide experience and an appreciation of the humor of a situation, many interesting stories are told of him. On one occasion he was preaching in St. Raphael's church, Madison, of which he was pastor. It was a fine summer day and the windows were open. In an adjoining vacant lot a number of boys were playing a game of baseball.

Father Pettit's sermon was on heaven and the means of reaching there. He had just come to the end of a passage—"How then, shall we reach heaven?" he asked, and paused in a solemn manner. Just then came floating through the church's window in a high keyed voice: "Slide like the devil, slide!"

It was one of the baseball players coaching a base runner.—Current Literature.

One of Platt's Placidity
Senator Depew used to have in his collection of curiosities a certain telegraphic dispatch which never failed to interest the politicians to whom he showed it. The telegram was sent to Mr. Depew, then president of the New York Central Railroad, by Mr. Platt, shortly before the latter's election to a second term in the senate. It is dated a few stations above Poughkeepsie, and reads: "Please stop the noon express here to take on Mrs. Platt and ME, TOO." "I stopped the train gladly," Mr. Depew would say when he exhibited it. "I am always willing to do a favor for a man who turns a joke on himself."—New York Times.

Why He Kicked
Milkman—Say, do you know where the family that used to live here have moved to?
Policeman—No. What do you want to know for?
Milkman—Because they have gone away without paying me $11 that they owed for milk.

Policeman—Well, I suppose there was about $6 worth of water in that bill, anyway.

Milkman—No, there wasn't; that's what makes me so blamed mad. They were new customers, and I hadn't begun to water the milk.—Boston Herald.

Joke on Himself
Bryan is not devoid of humor and that is his saving trait. At the Chautauqua cut in Osborne county the other day, he told a story on himself. When he was a young man just entering Nebraska politics, old Governor Thayer was a candidate for re-election and he made it a point to assail the governor on every occasion. As the campaign progressed, Bryan supposed that he had set the state afire with his burning denunciations, and that Governor Thayer was feeling mighty bad over the treatment he was getting. About this time Bryan was invited to address a non-partisan meeting of a certain meeting of a certain sort. Governor Thayer was chairman of the day, and Bryan was very uneasy lest the governor should make some kind of a scene in revenge for the abuse of himself. But, when Bryan's turn came, the governor stepped up and cordially shook him by the hand, saying in a stage whisper: "Which do you do, speak or sing?" The governor had never heard of him before.—Topeka Capital.

"I want you to remember," snapped the leading actress, who had had a misunderstanding with one of the subordinate players behind the scenes, "that I'm the star in this play."

"I know you're the star," returned the girl, glancing at the slender proportions of the other and shrugging her plump shoulders, "but you'd look better, my dear, if you were a little meeter."

Al Parks, of Cameron, was shot and instantly killed in Harpater's saloon at Hamilton at 10 o'clock Thursday by Ollie Holmes. The two men had a difficulty when Holmes pulled his revolver and shot Parks twice, one shot entering the left cheek, the other the right breast. Parks was 25 years of age and single. His father owns a tea store in Cameron. Holmes, the murderer, made his escape and is still at large.
