A SMELTER SCRIMMAGE. A Mexican Barries an Axe in the Head of Another, and Gets Shot.

Word reached the Herald office at 6:30 p. m., yesterday of a peculiar fatal scrap at the smelter settlement. The matter was investigated and the following story developed: Two Mexicans, Santos Rodriguez and Domingo Garcia were at Stupe's cantina drinking mescal at 5 p. m., and was very natural got into a discussion on a wide and varied assortment of things germane and ungermane to the matter in hand, as it were, or words that effect. Finally the orators withdrew by special request to the rear of the cantina where the polemic was continued with a more or less pyrotechnic array and display of the vernacular in all of its ramified ramifications. Presently Garcia lost his temper, and grabbing a heavy ax aimed a blow at Rodriguez that would have ended his sweet life then and there, only Garcia was many boracho and the blow fell short. However, it did scrape the skin off the other man's back for some distance, and reduced his size to a mere speck.

The new civil service rules promulgated by President McKinley yesterday are not thoroughly understood in El Paso as the full order has not yet been published. The order, however, as understood will not alter the El Paso custom house to any great extent and if it should be Collector Dillon who takes charge, he can only remove the deputy collector and cashier. If it should be Collector Campbell no one would be removed as he has the endorsement of the democratic crowd.

"Pickled Tea" is the latest cuisine rage for luncheon and afternoon teas among those who are particularly particular in their mothers' platters. It comes from Lower Burma and is practically preserved by insulage. While still green, the young leaves are picked and the center of the sea through smoked glass, and the dog became so stuck up that he bit a Mexican, who was coming along the street. The dog's father and mother plied the dog to George but he held the kids and landed the whole drove in jail. Josefa Salazar, who lives on West Overland street, has a dog which she adores. This morning she showed the dog the center of the sea through smoked glass, and the dog became so stuck up that he bit a Mexican, who was coming along the street. The dog's father and mother plied the dog to George but he held the kids and landed the whole drove in jail.

Law Gasser is now working on an acetabule gas generator which is about completed that will revolutionize the lighting of houses in the country, as the gas is very cheap when generated by this machine and the generator is so simple that a child can manage it. According to candle power the gas generated by the acetabule will cost about one-eighth as much as gas from the factory, and of course much cheaper than an electric light. Gasser has applied for a patent and expects to receive a patent in a few days. He has already one of the generators in operation and it furnishes a bright white light that is very steady. Lew thinks he has a fortune in the invention, and he is preparing to take all the energy he devotes to everything he handles.

While the Klondike gold fever is on it would be well for those who contemplate a trip to the frozen region to look around nearer home for the gold they are seeking. In the front of the world are lots of gold, but there are no mines or boom the placer fields. Some of the best prospects in the world lie in this section and as the gold is free in mining ore it can be worked very cheaply, but no money can be obtained to develop the mines. There are men in El Paso now who have taken the gold show up as fine as the claims in the new El Dorado in Alaska, but there is no money for improvement. The sands of the Klondike are not so rich as the gold and where it takes thousands of dollars to make an experiment in Alaska it would take hundreds to develop the mining resources of this country.

ROUND ABOUT. C. C. Russell of Eddy is in town, moment and only after repeated warnings, so he feels justified in his action.

WILL IT BE?

Some Statements Regarding the El Paso Collectors. Up to the present time the HERALD has refrained from taking any "dish" in the contest for the collectorship of the El Paso custom house and would so refrain at present, if it were not for the false statements made in the Morning Times, which paper is known to be organ of R. F. Campbell and which is virtually owned and controlled by the El Paso democratic boss. The Times says this morning that R. F. Campbell will be the next collector of El Paso, and then goes on to give John Clemmons and Senator Steve Elkins as his endorsers. So much for misstatements, now for facts.

A HERALD reporter called on John Clemmons this morning and asked him whether he went to Washington a month or so ago to endorse Col. Campbell. John said: "I did not go to Washington to endorse either Campbell or Dillon, nor did I endorse either of those parties. I went to Washington in my own interest. I wanted to be appointed Chinese inspector at this port and I am going to get it." This statement shows the kind of unreliable news the Times is dishing up to its readers. If the reporter had enough energy to go across the street he could have stated facts, instead of making up the whole of the matter.

Now let's see about Steve Elkins endorsement. It has been known to El Paso republicans since April 2, that Senator Elkins flatly refused to endorse Bob Campbell for the collectorship. The only reason he gave for his refusal was that he could not furnish a list of names of a character that is all reliable. It is hardly to be expected that a man that has betrayed his party as Mayor Campbell in El Paso could expect the endorsement of the republicans of this place. And it is a further well known fact that the democratic ring of El Paso are the chief endorsers of the candidacy for the collectorship of this port.

Another fact known to the republicans of this place is that Col. Campbell has not a ghost of a show for the appointment for this reason: The HERALD has made no statements regarding the race for the collectorship. The HERALD is the only republican paper published in El Paso and is the only one that can furnish political news of a character that is all reliable. Police Culling. Lucy Mican is a soiled dove who lives within prescribed limits, but she is addicted to disturbing the peace of that quiet neighborhood and for this reason the recorder placed on the debit side of Lucy's name the figure $3 with a $ mark in front. George Ross became agitated yesterday and let his language get away with his better judgment until the law was actuated and then George had to pay $2. James Hawley got drunk and boisterous last night and the police toted James to the jail, where he was incarcerated to play a five dollar license for his unbecoming conduct. Francisco Alvarez has a habit of sneaking into people's houses while they sleep and he occasionally gets his hands on the property of other people. He was caught last night and turned over to the county officers. Ned Jordan loaded himself up with a keg of beer and lay down on the street last night and he was arrested by the rest of Officer Schmidt, who with the assistance of another officer lugged Ned to jail, where the recorder taxed Ned one dollar for the disturbance. Archer Parker and Paul Brown got in a dispute over the deleterious effects of the Klondike fever. The argument became heated the longer it lasted and to make his argument stick Parker threw a brick at his motherly father, and the police interceded in Paul's behalf and carried the twin to the lockup. His majesty had been looking at the sun through smoked glasses this morning and could see no marks of violence on Paul's form so the two were told to go hence. George Herold caught a drove of Mexican boys swimming in the river this morning and he really plied the boys to George but he held the kids and landed the whole drove in jail. Josefa Salazar, who lives on West Overland street, has a dog which she adores. This morning she showed the dog the center of the sea through smoked glass, and the dog became so stuck up that he bit a Mexican, who was coming along the street. The dog's father and mother plied the dog to George but he held the kids and landed the whole drove in jail.

THE TIMES REPORTER LOOKING AT THE ECLIPSE. There were many early risers this morning. People were out gazing at the sun which was in eclipse and smoking cigars and eating breakfast. The sun rose it was in el pas and remained so until 9 o'clock. Its most dense period was at 7 o'clock and then the shadow of the moon began to move off to the west and into the sea. Not total here, and many people did not even realize that an eclipse was on. The morning was slightly cloudy, but a good view of the sun in elcpe could be obtained through smoked glass.

The Times this morning publishes a notice that was going around the country some weeks ago, making inquiry for Dick Jones, a printer. Dick Jones has lived in El Paso for more than a year and the above inquiry was answered three weeks ago by him. Dick Jones lives with his mother on Anthony street and is now employed at the Santa Fe round house.

The new civil service rules promulgated by President McKinley yesterday are not thoroughly understood in El Paso as the full order has not yet been published. The order, however, as understood will not alter the El Paso custom house to any great extent and if it should be Collector Dillon who takes charge, he can only remove the deputy collector and cashier.
