IT'S PUZZLING ::

TO a woman, sometimes, to know where to buy really good Maple Syrup.

Watson's Maple Syrup

IS exactly what Maple Syrup should be. I have it sent me by a farmer in Vermont, where the law says all maple sugar shall be pure, and takes to have it so.

Vermont Maple Syrup, too, has the reputation of being the best in the country.

That's the whole story in a nutshell.

Point for you to consider is whether it isn't better to buy where you know it's right; where no factory-made preparation finds admittance; or go where any old thing is sold.

DURRANT HANGED.

He Declared His Innocence to the Last.

HE DIED WITHOUT FEAR.

The Murderer of Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams Paid the Penalty on the Gallows at San Quentin Today.

WASHINGTON, January 7.—In less than three minutes after the supreme court assembled today Mr. L. P. Boardman, counsel for Theodore Durrant, arose and made application for a writ of habeas corpus for his client. The court room was crowded to its full capacity. There was a death-like stillness during the reading of the petition of the young man who pleaded so hard for action that would postpone the execution of Durrant. The court retired for consultation and at 12:30 denied the application.

SAN QUENTIN, January 7.—The end of a long, agonizing and widely-mooted trial has come and Theodore Durrant was swung into eternity at 10:27 this morning in execution of the crime of murdering Blanche Lamont, in Emanuel Baptist church in San Francisco April, 1895.

At 10:22 Mr. and Mrs. Durrant bid farewell to their son and left the corridor of the jail for the execution. Preparations for the execution began immediately. Durrant's arms were strapped and in a moment the death march to the gallows began. Father Logan stood on the right of the condemned man and said prayers for the repose of the man's soul who was on his way to meet death. Over one hundred people had been admitted to the gallows room and as the time arrived for the execution all eyes were fixed on the door directly behind the gallows and absolute silence reigned. At last the door swung open and the procession marched to the gallows. No time was lost as it was the wish of the condemned man that the execution be hurried through. Durrant stepped bravely upon the scaffold and in a calm, cold, deliberate manner announced his innocence of the crime for which he was being executed. At 10:25 he took his stand on the trap. Amos and the hangman was ready and waited the signal. The word "ready" was given, there was a swish, the trap dropped, the rope tightened and William Henry Durrant swung to his death. The execution was perfect, the noise had been properly adjusted and after swinging for five minutes the doctors stepped forward and felt his pulse. Life was declared extinct. The execution was completed after Mr. and Mrs. Durrant were rest over their son's fate and could not sleep. He, however, slept well and ate a hearty breakfast of beefsteak, eggs, etc. When a few minutes before the execution word came that the supreme court had denied him a writ of habeas corpus Durrant blanched, heaved a sigh, and expressed resignation to his fate.

The man who murdered Blanche Lamont was the foulest and one of the most remarkable crimes of the century. W. H. Theodore Durrant was a medical student. He was well advanced in his studies; a cool, collected young man who stood by the dissecting table; immovable. He was not liked by his fellow students, who tolerated him in the lecture rooms, but shunned him in their amusements. One morning in April, 1895, the city of San Francisco was astounded with the news that awful crimes had been committed in the Emanuel Baptist church. Miss Minnie Williams, a young school girl who attended the church was found in the pastor's study, murdered. There was no clue to the perpetrator of the deed. Detectives went to work on the case and in a few days another body was found high up in the bell tower. She proved to be the friend and school mate of Minnie Williams and her name was Blanche Lamont. She had been missing about ten days when found. She was entirely nude and after diligent search clothing was found high in different parts of the bell tower. The finding of the second body dead in the same church aroused the city and the detectives were doubly diligent in ferreting out the perpetrator of the crime. Circumstantial evidence pointed to Theodore Durrant as the murderer in both instances as he had been the associate of the two murdered girls.

The Durrant was not only a medical student, but also a militiaman, and when the crime was laid at his door he was absent from the city with a military corps. When the detectives started after him he was not fired by graphic signals that some one in the party was wanted for murder. He made no attempt to escape and made no sign that he was a guilty party. When arrested he was cool and collected. He was carried back to San Francisco and his innocence

His trial lasted for three months and was one of the longest criminal legal battles ever fought out in the courts of this country. He was convicted and sentenced to death. Then began a legal war in the higher courts. He was again sentenced. His attorneys carried the case to the supreme court of the United States and the decision there was against him. An attempt was made to reopen the case and this again failed. The governor of California was appealed to for a reprieve and then the case was carried to the United States supreme court on a writ of habeas corpus. The decision was rendered this morning and was adverse to Durrant. It sealed his doom.

He was launched into eternity according to due process of law after one to the greatest battles to escape the gallows in the history of America. Consoling the grief-stricken by Father Logan, the Roman Catholic priest, who but few moments before had administered extreme unction, the murderer, pale but still calm with an assured or natural look, a martyr on his face mounted the gallows. He stepped on the box and awaited the end as though he were watching a dissection in the school where he attended. He declared that he was innocent and that the state was committing a judicial murder. Concluding his brief talk he stepped back and took his place upon the trap. The rope was dropped over his head, the cap was properly placed and the black cap adjusted. During this trying ordeal, with no apparent assumption of the bravado, the murderer held up wonderfully. Not a quiver of legs or arms or body, or usual heaving of breast being discernible. A few compelling words from the priest, the word "ready" was given, there was a swish and the great tragedy was ended.

As he had lived, or assumed to live since his incarceration, he died bravely and without any of customary signs of fear of the gallows; no declaration that he was saved; that he was going to heaven.

Talk of Assassinating Governor Bushnell, of Ohio.

IT IS A CAMPAIGN LIE.

A Cincinnati Paper Starts a Startling Rumor About a Plot to Assassinate Bushnell for His Stand Against Hanna.

CINCINNATI, O., January 7.—An afternoon paper publishes the following from Columbus: The most startling rumor in connection with the present senatorial fight was started late last night. It was to the effect that a plot had been discovered to assassinate Gov. Bushnell. When the rumor reached the headquarters of the anti-Hannans it created the biggest kind of a sensation. Governor Bushnell said: "I have heard there were threats of violence being made against me, but I have paid but little attention to them."

It is thought that the Hanna headquarters that it was simply a rumor from the anti-Hannans to create excitement for the governor. Brice democrats are working hard to keep the democrats away from the session. If they can keep twenty away Hanna, as a majority present will elect. COLUMBUS, Ohio, January 7.—The committee in charge of the democratic state headquarters have sent out an address to the people of Ohio attacking Hanna and calling upon all democrats to remain true to Calvin S. Brice. Brice is also denounced as a traitor and is charged with being in league with Hanna. The republican state committee has issued a call for a mass meeting at Columbus on Monday next to protest against the fight by the republican anti-Hanna people.

A FREE SILVER BILL.

It is Introduced in the Senate and Advocated by Senator Teller.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—In the senate Mr. Allen offered a resolution stating that the United States, without waiting for the consent of other nations, shall begin hereafter to continue the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1; that such coinage shall be supplemented by a safe and sound national paper money issued directly by the government without the intervention of the banks. Mr. Allen read a prepared speech in advocacy of the resolution. Mr. Teller followed. He said he did not propose to discuss the financial commission in general way, but wanted to call attention to a new paper statement that silver advocates were forcing a split between the president and the secretary of the treasury. He said it was not for the silver question was not a personal one. Referring to the international bimetallic conference, he said its failure had been officially declared. If any body is going to continue the Great Britain would agree to anything that would bring about bimetalism they had better give it up as failed. The result, which was not the fault of the United States, was that the financial commission in general was not a personal one. Continuing his speech Mr. Teller said he had been convinced that any further attempt at international bimetalism was farce. "It is no time," he exclaimed, "that this great country shall do what its sympathies dictate? It is not time to say take hands off that beautiful island of Cuba, you have already killed one third of its population, you must now stop on the money? The dividends, the prices of bonds and stock and fear of a war prevent our doing that. I did not vote for the arbitration treaty and have been branded in a public sermon as a man favoring a war. I voted not because I want war, but because that treaty was an indecent attempt on the part of last administration and the British government to bind the hands of this body and the American people. I voted against it because I realized that there are infinitely worse things than war; because I know as a student of history that a nation that loses warlike habits never regained independence. I don't believe there will be a war if we put our hands on Cuba, but if war did come from it, let war come. The republican party is in power. I attack it. First—on the ground that it is a gold standard party and I will destroy it if I can." Mr. Teller pronounced the sentence with extreme bitterness. "I hope to see it down in 1900; I will do everything I can to bring it to grief. My quarrel is not with the administration but with the republican organization."
