NAMES FOR BAD WORKMEN. (New York Times.) Strikes bring out the technical slang of the trades, and particularly the opprobrious epithets with which the different classes of workmen distinguish the unskilled operatives who labor at the same trades. In most cases it will be found that these slang terms originate in some technicality of the trade.

Thus the telegraphers can call a poor operator a "plug" after the little metal implement which divides the switches on the key-board, inasmuch as the "plug" or "key" is a comparatively unimportant part of the machinery. Printers designate an unskilled typesetter a "sheemaker" or "blacksmith." The derivation of the former appellation is from the fact that a compositor who makes errors is obliged to correct them after the type has been set up by taking out the misplaced letters, and "pecking" the proper ones into their place.

Tailors also use the word "sheemaker" to distinguish a poor hand, as an unskilled workman takes his stitches too far apart, and is therefore better adapted to sew leather, where he can punch the holes with an awl putting his needle through. The appellation "black-mith" is applied to a printer whose fingers are clumsy, and a jeweler also terms an unskilled worker at his trade a "blacksmith" for the same reason.

A term of opprobrium, which was used by old New York printers to designate an unskilled compositor, was the word "boarder," from the fact that a poor hand was generally a drinking man, and spent his loafing or "boarding" in liquor saloons. All striking trade-workers in common use the generic word "scab" to distinguish workmen who take the places of strikers. The derivation is obviously from the fact that the scab is a morbid growth, and lives only at the expense of the well-being of the rest of the body. Shakespeare used the word scab as a term of opprobrium, and Webster defines a scab as "a mean, dirty, paltry fellow," which may have suggested the original application of the word to its present use.

THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

The Trouble Among the Creeks—Demanding a Division of Lands and Government.

Little Rock, August 2.—An Indian Territory special says: "The differences between the Creek Indians are by no means adjusted, and it is claimed that the United States government will be forced to arbitrate the trouble. The tribes divide into factions, one led by Spioche and the other by Chito, and denominated as the Northern and Southern Creeks. The former control the local government and claim a majority of the people; the latter are making an effort to separate forever from the Chito party, and at a recent and largely attended convention passed resolutions requesting the United States government to maintain the troops stationed at different points in the Creek country, announcing that they, the Northern Creeks had elected a chief and organized a local government and craved military protection, and urging Congress at its next session to divide the Creek nation by a line running East and West so that the contending parties may have their own land and manage their own affairs."

They also refused to attend the pacification convention held at Okmulgee, on the 27th ultimo, claiming that it had been organized in the interest of the Southern Creeks, and would therefore be unable to give them justice. The resolutions were signed by Spioche, chief of the loyal Creeks, and twenty-five leading Indians, and one generally indorsed by the Northern Creeks.

The idea of secession from the Southern wing of the tribe is gaining ground rapidly. The adherents of Spioche claim it is the only way to effectually adjust the local troubles, and that unless it is done, internecine war will continue until the entire tribe is exterminated.

It is expected that the commissioners appointed by President Arthur to inquire into the causes of the late local difficulties will consider the question of division, and perhaps favor the scheme. In any event it will be necessary to maintain troops in the Creek country to prevent further faction fighting.

Edison Gives Up Inventing. (New York Evening Post.) "I have given up inventing and experimenting," said Mr. Edison. "I am a business man now, devoted to make inventions pay. It requires just as much ingenuity to make money out of an invention as to make the invention. Now that the down-town electric light station is in working order, we have 5,000 lamps fed from that one station—I am cheapening the cost of installation. I have succeeded so well that I can build and equip a station to do the same work as that done in Pearl street for less than one-half the money. The chief part of our business now consists in taking contracts to fit out small or large towns with the Edison electric light. We contract for a certain sum to fit a town with electric light in every detail. We put up our own buildings, set the engine and dynamo, run the wire through the streets, carry them into houses, put up the fixtures, set the machinery agoing and furnish light for thirty days, at the end of which time if everything is satisfactory to both sides, we turn the system over to the town and pocket our money. We will agree to fit up a town with 2,000 electric lights inside of three months from the time the contract is signed, and sooner than that if necessary. I honestly believe that every one of the gas companies in the towns where the electric light is established will have to go out of the business of furnishing light. I am so convinced of the system's success that, as I said before, I have given up inventing and taken to business pure and simple. I am a contractor, and I like the work. I have sold out my interest in the electric locomotive, and do not want to see the inside of a laboratory."

Millionaire Mackey's Swell Ball. (Carson Appeal.) The round of amusements which Mr. Mackey is providing for the American colony since his return to Paris from the great fetes at Moscow are the all-absorbing topic of the hour. At the ball given last Saturday, as our special correspondent reports, Mr. Mackey hired the King of Sweden to dance with the American ladies, paying him $1,000 an hour for the work. About midnight he struck for higher wages, and Mr. Mackey stood the raise with true American sang froid. By 4 o'clock the king was completely blown with his social exercises and was taken from the room in a fainting condition. Mr. Mackey offered to pay all his funeral expenses if he died, which generous offer made him many friends among the Swedes.

Several descendants of the Bonaparte family who attempted to climb into the windows of the ball-room were thrown into the basin of the fountain by Mr. Mackey, who stands over six feet in his socks, and is called "the strong man of Nevada." Although Mr. Mackey danced until daylight and went off shirt at six o'clock, he whipped two editors of the royalist faction before breakfast for publishing an incorrect description of the dresses worn at the blow-out. When the bodies of the editors were born away in an ambulance to the hospital de invalides, the crowds applauded in the streets.

On Sunday last Mr. Mackey was taken with a chill, and feeling that his hour was near, purchased the tomb of Napoleon for the sum of $100,000, and had it at once taken to his family garden. On recovering in the afternoon he sold it to the czar at an advance of fifty per cent. The Journal of Finance applauds this masterly stroke of business. The only accident that marred the harmony of the grand ball was when the eldest daughter of the Count de Chambord fell into one of the tanks of champagne, which had carelessly been left in the corridor and was drowned. The tank held 1,000 gallons, and the body was not discovered until the floor managers had drunk the tank nearly dry.

Dr. Daniel Asbury, of North Carolina, is punning his pious for a public aerial ascension and sail. The two canvas wings of his flying machine stretch thirty feet broad from tip to tip, and all the man-bird has to do to regulate his flight is to work a pedal like that on a sewing machine.
