SENSATION OF THE DAY.

The Assailant of O'Donovan Rossa a Canadian, with Relatives in Government Offices.

Counsel Summoned to Defend the Prisoner by Unknown Friends—Awaiting the Result of the Wound.

A Fight Between the Socialists and the Police—Startling Disclosures in Pittsburg.

THE DYNAMITER'S CONDITION.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The headquarters of O'Donovan Rossa's paper have been temporarily removed to the Chambers street hospital, where its editor-in-chief lies to-day with a bullet from Mrs. Dudley's pistol still imbedded in his back. Rossa's office in Center street is closed to-day. The physicians at the hospital thought that Rossa had improved during the night. The only visitor to Rossa up to 11 o'clock this morning was his secretary, Patrick Joyce. Mrs. Rossa went home late last night and had not returned this morning.

O'DONOVAN'S HISTORY.

Jeremiah O'Donovan has been a conspicuous figure in Irish national affairs for years. He tackled the word "Rossa," which in Gaelic means "red," to his name after reaching this country, after having been discharged from an English prison. He came to this country with Thos. Francis Burke, Dr. Denis Dowling Mulcahy and John Devoy about 1869. He was engaged in a number of enterprises in New York. He has been ticket agent for the Trans-Atlantic line of steamers and hotel-keeper. He ran for state senator in the Tenth senatorial district against Wm. M. Tweed and was badly defeated. He opened a hotel at the corner of Chatham square and Moti street, which for a while did a good business, being the regular resort for Irish nationalists.

IRISH FAIR ASSASSIN.

Mrs. Dudley was taken this morning from the station-house where she had been confined during the night to the Tombs police court. A number of people gathered at the station-house and followed the officers and their charge while they walked to the court-house. When the court was reached Mrs. Dudley was conducted into a private examination room, where she remained until her case was called by Justice Patterson. Arthur C. Butts, her lawyer, accompanied the accused to the court. When the fact of became known the hall became rapidly occupied, until entrance was denied to the late comers. The enclosure reserved for lawyers was occupied by a number of these gentlemen, some politicians and a swarm of reporters. When Mrs. Dudley entered the gaze of every person in the court-room was riveted on her face. She walked calmly to the bar between an officer and her lawyer, and after looking for a moment into the justice's face, she let her eyes fall to the ground. She looked a trifle tired after having spent the night in the station-house, but her cheeks were still rosy and her eyes were quite bright.

THE PRESENCE OF THE PRISONER

AN UNKNOWN FRIEND.

Lawyer Butts presented the case. He said that he received a dispatch late last night signed P. Edwards, asking him to defend Mrs. Dudley. He went to the station-house and saw Mrs. Dudley. She said that she knew nothing about the dispatch but desired him to take charge of her case. He learned by the morning papers to-day that the dispatch was a bogus one. J. Pierrepont Edwards, the British consul, denied having sent any dispatch whatever, but he said that he had not been consulted by any of Mrs. Dudley's friends and did not know what he should do in the case.

He continued: "She told me that she desired me to defend her. While reserving my right as counsel to act in the case or to withdraw, I shall endeavor to do what will be for Mrs. Dudley's best interest. For the present my client will remain mute. She neither pleads guilty nor not guilty."

THE PRISONER REMANDED.

The court remarked that she would be held to await the result of Rossa's injury, and remanded her. When Mrs. Dudley turned to leave the court room a smile played upon her face. She drew her cloak about her and walked calmly out of the room behind the officer. The house surgeon of the Chambers street hospital sent a communication to the court stating that on examination of Rossa's wound he found that the ball had entered over the center of the left scapula, taking an upward and inward course, passing beneath the skin for four inches. This morning he was in good condition, having passed a comfortable night. He slept quietly, suffering no pain, and no uncomfortable symptoms have developed yet. Mrs. Dudley was looked in a cell at the Tombs. She refused to say anything to the reporters.

MRS. DUDLEY A CANADIAN.

Another sketch of Mrs. Dudley, given by a woman who says that she is an intimate friend, makes the prisoner a Canadian, a native of Montreal. She came to New York eight or nine months ago and was employed at a nurse at the New York hospital. While there she sang solo with an unusually fine voice. She was considered strong-minded. Her father holds a government position of a petty nature in Montreal. She has other relatives prominent in government circles. Her cousin, Dr. Van Noy, was the physician two years ago to the company which built the large hotel at Rockaway. Another family of relatives held positions in Quebec. This branch when in New York she used to visit them.
