There was a very pleasant social last night at the residence of J. S. Smith, Esq., next door to St. Paul's Methodist church, given under the auspices of that church. Quite a number were present and the time was delightfully spent. Miss Dell Smith, the daughter of the host and hostess, aided greatly in entertaining those present. These sociables do much to unite the members of the church, making them acquainted with one another and with their pastor. Long live the church sociable.

An accident occurred at the funeral of Mrs. Terrell yesterday, which came near resulting seriously to two ladies. The procession was brought to one of those sudden halts so common on such occasions, when a horse backing into the horse which Mrs. Dr. Jackson and Miss Willie Burts were driving caused him to become unmanageable. Both of the ladies were thrown from the buggy, but fortunately escaped with no further damage than a few painful bruises. One or two other casualties of a like nature occurred.

THE CHANGE IS MADE.
IT IS POSTMASTER JULIAN FELD NOW, BY THE GRACE OF GROVER CLEVELAND.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon Capt. Julian Feld and Mrs. Burchell began the work of transferring the postoffice, the latter to the former. The work proceeded rapidly, and by 7:30 was completed, all being pleasant and agreeable. Then Mrs. Burchell, who for over four years has presided over the destinies of Uncle Sam's mail in this city, stepped out of office, and Postmaster Julian Feld stepped in. All the old clerks stepped with the exception of Miss Addie Letchworth remain with the new postmaster, and Miss Letchworth was tendered a position until December 1, but declined. Capt. Feld brings considerable experience to the office, and will doubtless make an efficient and satisfactory postmaster. Mrs. Burchell carries with her the good wishes of many of our citizens, who consider her a model official.

A ROMANTIC WEDDING.

IN THE STORIED HALLS THE BRIDE READIES HER CONSULIAL VOWS.

Yesterday evening when the town clock struck 8, a small party had assembled at the residence of Mrs. Kate Kane, No. 313 West Bellarm street, to witness the marriage of Mr. W. B. Burr and Miss Lena Lee, both of this city. Rev. Mr. Gillespie of the South-Side Baptist church officiated. The scene was indeed romantic and at the same time solemn. The bride had been confined to her room for several weeks, and was only able to be raised in sitting posture while the ceremony was said. The beautiful calm face of the bride as she reclined on the snowy-white bed, the gallant groom, as he stood by her side holding her enclasped hand, and the silvery-haired minister, as he spoke the words that should bind two loving hearts together for life, formed a scene fit for an artist to paint or a poet to describe. It is needless to say that those who witnessed it will never forget its solemnity.

THE GAZETTE sincerely hopes that the bride may soon be restored to health, and that the young couple may have a safe and prosperous journey through life.

TELL THE TRUTH.

A DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENT ADVISED IT AND MADE NO EXCEPTIONS OF THE DRAMA.

The audience was small at the second performance of "The World" last night. Its stage settings were thoroughly appropriate, but it is difficult to convince an audience that a play can be successfully presented with out actors, or that spectacular effects are the alpha and omega of the legitimate drama. Albeit, the paraphernalia of the stage should be but the trapplings, and the salts of genius in the effort to substantiate them in its stead must inevitably result in disaster to the manager who attempts it.

THE GAZETTE feels a profound sympathy for the man or woman whose best efforts on the stage are never fed by that fuel which even misguided ambition must crave—applause. But THE GAZETTE owes a duty to the public which compels it to advise those who are so thoroughly untrained for a theatrical career to seek a calling more congenial with their talents. Heaven makes actors, and newspapers, even were they inclined to the task, are not equal to it.

THROUGH AN OPERA GLASS.

HOW THE SON-DANCING ELEMENT, THE OLD FOLKS AND THE CHILDREN WILL ENJOY THE BALL.

A pleasant feature of the great ball to-morrow night will be the reservation of the balcony to the use of those who do not care to participate in the festivities below. The old folks, especially, whose dancing days are over, but whose appreciations of those innocent pleasures that delighted their childhood days is not yet destroyed, will appreciate this. When from this elevation they survey the elegant costumers of the fair revelers and listen to the enchanting music of a splendid band, how many pleasant and fond memories will be revived! It is difficult to conceive of a scene more likely to excite the admiration of those who have a taste for the beautiful. Hundreds of lovely women, beautifully attired, gazing upon the arms of gallant cavaliers sweeping merrily around to the measures of the entrancing waltz, marking the lively who-claps or solo numbers—this is indeed a scene that the drama rarely equals.

It may be questioned whether the spectators will not get the most genuine enjoyment out of the ball, and it is certain that they will witness a social drama beside which a large portion of the theatrical entertainments will seem tame and insipid.

No invitations have been issued to the ball. Tickets can be had by the proper parties from the following persons: A. M. Britton, W. A. Huffman, G. T. Potter, G. M. Kern, G. H. Dashwood, W. T. Maddox, McDonalds W. A. Huffman, John F. Swayne, S. W. Lomax, and at the opera-house.

Admission to the balcony at the ball, $1.00; children, 50 cents.

Ladies who have contributed to the Thanksgiving ball and banquet are requested to send their donations to the room above Pendleton's, between the hours of 10 o'clock this morning and 10 a. m. to-morrow.

JONES OR CUNNINGHAM.

KILLED A MURDERER OR AN INNOCENT MAN—CONFLICTING EVIDENCE.

Three days ago a man of about thirty-five years of age came in on the Santa Fe, and, owing to the Hotel Brunswick, registered "R. S. Cunningham, Attorney, Mo." Monday night, he told Mr. A. H. Jones, the clerk, that he had found an old friend here and was going to stop with him, paid his bill and went out with the gentleman. The same night Officer Rushing came in and asked if a man named Cunningham was staying there. Mr. Jones told him no, but he was with a friend in the city, when Rushing said, "I will give you ten dollars if you find where he

208 MAIN STREET.

Hotel Brunswick.

This neat, cosy hotel, under the new management of Messrs. Rowland & Held, is doing a thriving business. It has been put in thorough order within and without and presents a very fine appearance. The table, under the special management of Mr. L. S. Held, cannot be surpassed by any hotel in the city, and every attention is awarded the guests by the waiters.

The rooms are clean, airy and well furnished, and consequently very inviting. Theatrical troupes who have heretofore stopped with Mr. Held, while at the Liedell, are most courageously invited to try him in his new quarters, as he feels that he can accommodate them to much better advantage than before.

The management bespeaks a share of the commercial travel, as they have rooms peculiarly adapted for that business, and will spare no pains for their accommodation. We have only to say that, from present appearances, all who give the Brunswick a trial will leave the hotel with regrets.
