OBITUARY.

Mrs. Lucretia Birdsong.

Lucretia Birdsong was born in Columbia, Tenn., June 6, 1858, and died February 27, 1907, at 7:35 o'clock being at the time of her death 48 years, eight months and 21 days old. She professed a hope in Christ February, 1882, and joined Spruce Street Baptist Church and was baptized by Rev. N. G. Merry. She was married to E. W. Birdsong, June 8, 1882, and was to the morning of her death, married 24 years, 7 months and 19 days. Her illness, which was of 13 month's duration, was borne by her with Christian fortitude worthy of mention. Not a time was she ever heard to murmur. During her Christian career of 25 years, her life was one full of good deeds worthy of emulation. She was very much attached to her church and as long as her health would permit, was found present and working in the Master's vineyard.

Mrs. Birdsong was bound as with an unbreakable chain, and never dying love to her family, which consisted of her husband, Sarah Jones and little G. W. Gore. In her home she was an ideal woman, as all who know of her will attest, it being her chief desire to make those about her happy. In return for this there stood ever at her side during her long hour of suffering, "Eddie," Sarah and her sister Alice, with anxious hearts both willing and ready to do what ever she desired in the tenderest and most gentle way. Whenever she thought they looked depressed, she would bid them cheer up, for, said she, "I am all right. The will of the Master must be done." On the morning of her death she called for a hymn to be played and sung for her and as her life sweetly took its flight, there was being sung softly and sweetly, "My soul looks up to Thee," which she seemed to enjoy. She leaves to mourn her departure a kind and loving husband, Sarah, most faithful and true, five sisters, together with a host of friends and relatives.

such proportions that they saw fit to add a shoe department to their store, and this only proved the way for another feature which was the ready to wear clothing for ladies and children. After these were added it soon became evident that the old quarters were too small, and with their keen insight to business they set about to find a suitable site and one that would give ample room for the increasing business. This had to be gone about quietly for desirable business sites are now at a premium in this city. But the company was the successful bidders among many for the commodious buildings at the corner of Fifth avenue and Church street.

The buildings have been remodeled from top to bottom which makes them practically new, and the attractions are so great that no one can pass without being tempted to go in and purchase something.

Hirshberg Bros. see to it that every customer receives courteous treatment, and their reputation for giving value received needs no comment.
