THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

Convention at Augusta Yesterday—Dr. R. H. Yantis for Congress.

Representatives of the People's party in the Ninth Congressional District met in Convention at Augusta yesterday for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress. Quite a number of the third party followers were on hand, almost every county being represented.

Dr. R. H. Yantis of Fleming county received the nomination on the first ballot. He was not present but a telegram was received from him stating that he would accept.

Among those in attendance from this county were William Luttrell, Joseph Ball and William Broshers.

The nominee is a prominent citizen of Fleming county and was formerly a Democrat, having been elected County Judge and represented his county in the Legislature as such. He has been a practicing physician but is now practically a farmer.

This is the first effort of the new party in this Congressional District, and it intends to make the fight for all there is in it.

TRAGEDY RECALLED.

Death at Denver of Mrs. Overdick Closes a Sad and Bloody Chapter.

Mrs. Grace A. Overdick died at Denver, Col., Wednesday.

The announcement brings to mind one of the bloodiest tragedies ever enacted in Cincinnati—a crime in which the guilty derer, after shooting his wife, kills his eight-year-old daughter and then blows out his own brains.

It will be remembered that on Sunday, May 12th, 1889, at the early hour of 8 o'clock, Moritz I. Blanc a chemist did the deeds noted. The affair occurred in the Kenilworth Flats on West Seventh street, and to this day are not excelled in the annals that chronicle so many dark crimes.

On a beautiful afternoon in August Blanc was promiscuously Fourth street, when he entered upon a flirtation with a handsome woman, who in a few days became his wife. The woman was Mrs. Grace A. Overdick, step-daughter of J. C. Hanover a real estate agent, and the one who died at Denver.

The woman had a girl by her former husband, and Blanc had a girl, Flora, aged 8. With the children the couple moved to fashionable Hartwell, and lived in good style; but soon the wife tired of the country, and wanted to get back to the city. Blanc, who was out, played as before with the girl, and the guilty man was seen entering an assignation house on Race street. Blanc was down town awaiting the result of the detective's inquiries, and reached the assignation house in time to discover his wife leaving that den of shamelessness in company with Harry Hoffman, a noted gambler.

The wife returned to their flat in the Kenilworth, and Blanc, after making a purchase of a revolver in a pawnbroker's shop, returned to the flat. Mrs. Blanc retired, but her husband restlessly and angrily paced the floor all night brooding over his wife's infidelity. He charged her with having broken her marriage vows, and she simply laughed at him.

At 8 o'clock the next morning Mrs. Blanc went to the kitchen and ordered breakfast. As she returned to the parlor he beckoned her to come and sit down by his side. She did so, and he placing the revolver against her temple fired. Then he retreated to an inner room, where his girl, all unconscious of the tragedy that had just been enacted, ran up to him.

The father did not receive her loving caresses happily, but instead pointed the revolver, with which he had just killed his wife, at her, and fired and killed her. Then having nothing for which to live he turned the weapon upon himself and sent a ball crashing through his temple. Father and child died at the hospital the same day. The wife recovered and died in Denver. She was a consumptive, and was in search of health.

SELECTIONS from Ingersoll were read at the funeral of Margaret Colter, aged 14, in Springfield, O., at the request of the father, who is not a believer in the Christian religion. Mr. Colter's mother, who is a believer, retired from the services.

BELLE SOUSELY and Nancy Schelling, colored women, were fined $5 and costs each yesterday by Mayor Pearce for using abusive language towards each other. Belle is a young and Nancy a very old woman. They live on East Fourth street.

THE remains of James Whitcomb, twice Governor of Indiana, and a member of the U. S. Senate when he died in New York City, October 4th, 1852, were removed a few days ago from Greenlawn Cemetery to Crown Hill, where he was finally laid to rest in the lot adjoining that where Governor Morton lies in Indianapolis. Before burial the casket was opened, and the body was found to be in a remarkable state of preservation. A few old residents who had known the Governor, stated that the appearance of the features was remarkably natural. The face was smooth-shaven, the forehead high, the hair black, and although forty years had elapsed the appearance was not unlike that of a person who had been dead less than two days.

HENRY ADAMS of New Hampshire and James Deresby Watton an Englishman were scorched to death in an attempt to reach the crater of the volcano near Colima, Mexico. They had a dispute as to the respective pluck of Englishmen and Americans, and it was agreed that he who should succeed in first planting the flag of his country at the edge of the crater should be held to have made good his claim. Clouds of cinders shot up from the crater, and when last seen the adventurers were grasping each other by the hands. Following close on the cloud of cinders occurred a terrific explosion, and a huge volume of molten lava rose fountain-like against the sky, in which, as it descended in streams down the sides of the cone, the foolhardy couple were engulfed.

A VALUABLE shepherd dog belonging to Albert Mittendorf, Cincinnati, was captured by the Humane Society a few days ago and was redeemed by his owner. The dog's license had been paid, and the man carried off his property. The day following the dog broke away from its original owner, and found its way to the Humane Society, where it waited contented at the door of the institution until an opportunity was presented, when it bolted in and bounded upon Superintendent Love with all the tender caresses of which a dog is capable. He refused to be driven away, and seemed to regard the tribunal from which his death sentence was liable to be pronounced as preferable to his home. Superintendent Love notified his private secretary to inform the owner of the canine that unless he reclaimed the animal it would be in danger of gastrocution.

ORLOWITZ, the assailant of H. C. Frick, left a very odorous name in Cincinnati. When he went there two years ago he was sick, and was cared for by a gentleman who thought him worthy of assistance, especially as he had no friends. At the end of a spell that kept him down six or seven weeks, Orlowitz secured work at printing, and after drawing two weeks' wages skipped out with it all. He was traced to Indianapolis, but got out before he could be arrested. There he left a board bill. He was very talkative on matters referring to anarchy, and was always smoking cigarettes. When he bought a glass of beer he would insist that the glass be filled till all foam was gone, then he would deliberately empty half the contents on the floor, remarking that all he wanted was to get the worth of his money. As might be supposed, he left no friends in that city.

New Train on the C. and O.

The new train, which will run daily except Sunday, will leave Fourth Street Depot, Cincinnati, at 9 a. m., reaching Maysville at 11:45 a. m.; returning, it will leave Maysville at 5 p. m. and reach Cincinnati at 7:45 p. m. Stops will be made at all stations, and the train arrangement on the C. and O. between Maysville and Cincinnati will every requirement of the traveling public, and as there are cheap round trip tickets on sale between all stations on the Cincinnati Division, the increased traffic is likely to continue. On the new schedule, the F. F. V. Westbound will not stop between Maysville and Newport, and the Washington Fast Line will not stop regularly except at New Richmond, Augusta and South Ripley.

TO THE DEATH.

Deputy Sheriff Grant Sellers Killed by John Coffey.

Before Giving Up the Ghost Sellers Gives Coffee a Fatal Wound.

Both Men, Who Were Excellent Shots, Die in a Few Minutes on the Street at Flat Rock, Ky.—The Difficulty is Said to Have Originated Over a Woman.

SOMERSET, Ky., July 29.—The town of Flat Rock, Pulaski county, was the scene of a bloody and fatal encounter between Deputy Sheriff Grant Sellers and John Coffey. On Tuesday Coffey was arrested and brought before the county judge on the charge of adultery. After a trial, in which Coffey with difficulty kept his temper, he was fined $20, and warned that if such a thing occurred again he would get a heavier dose. Now, as the woman was very good-looking and attractive, he was very loath to give her up, and further he was angered that he had had to part with a good $20 bill. So in his anger he went away vowing vengeance against Deputy Sheriff Sellers, and openly threatening that he would kill Sellers on sight.

The friends of Deputy Sheriff Sellers and those of Coffey were well aware that both were dangerous men, and that neither would show the white feather, even if he could save his life by so doing, and therefore they were worried lest the two men would come together, for they knew that such a meeting meant death to one or both of them. Accordingly they made every endeavor to keep them apart. These two men were excellent shots, and either of them could hit the bull's eye every time at a distance of 500 yards.

After the trial on Tuesday, and after Coffey's threat that he would kill the deputy sheriff, Sellers, who has been a deputy sheriff for but two weeks, was called to Flat Rock on business connected with the sheriff's office, and came fully armed and prepared to defend himself, if necessary. He was walking down the main street of the town, little thinking that Coffey was near, when he heard a friend of his utter a cry of warning, and as he looked up and reached for his gun at the same time, Coffey opened fire and shot him through the breast. The bullet was aimed carefully, and with the intent to kill, and Sellers was grievously wounded and fell on his knees. He had, however, before the bullet struck him, drawn his gun. Wounded to death as he was, his nerve did not desert him, for he took careful aim, and shot Coffey four times. Each of these shots would have been fatal. Coffey fell to the ground, and then both men expired in a few minutes. They were near of an age, and were between 30 and 35 years old, and were both married, and were popular men in this community.

Evicted Families Moving.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 29.—Twenty-two families of striking laborers, who lived in company houses on Shanty Hill, moved out Thursday evening, it being the expiration of the time for the men to go to work for the company or leave the residences. The families made quite a striking procession as they marched through the town to the quarters provided by the Amalgamated association. They walked with their wives and children on the sidewalks, while a number of vans with household goods accompanied the evicted in the streets.

Hello Gris Strike.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 29.—Eighteen girls employed in the operating room of the Central Union Telephone Co. quit work Thursday and refused to answer any calls till the manager should discharge Miss Jennie Conell, the chief operator. The girls claimed that they were subject to a great many annoyances by Miss Conell; that she was constantly finding fault with them, and that she refused to let them leave the room even in cases of necessity. Miss Jennie was bounced and the girls returned to work.

Against H. Clay King.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 29.—H. Clay King, the murderer of David H. Poston, appeared by his attorneys, Thursday, before Judge Jackson, of the United States circuit court, on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Judge Jackson refused the writ, and refused the right of appeal to the United States supreme court, and also any stay of execution. The attorneys for King will immediately carry the case into the United States supreme court by writ of error.
