

THE STRIKE OFF.

One of the Most Disastrous Labor Movements

Comes to an End By the Action of the Amalgamated Association.

The Homestead Strike Decided by a Small Majority—Those in Favor Were Jubilant While Those Against It Were Badly Put Out.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 21.—The great strike at Carnegie's Homestead steel works has been declared off. After a five months' struggle, which, for bitterness, has probably never been equaled in this country, the army of strikers finally decided Sunday to give up the fight. This action was taken at a meeting of the lodges of the Amalgamated association at Homestead Sunday afternoon, the vote standing 101 in favor of declaring the strike off and 91 against it. Among those present at the meeting were Vice-President Carney, Secretary Kilgallon, Treasurer Madden and David Lynch, of the advisory board.

The officials addressed the members, and in plain words told them the strike was lost, and advised them to take steps to better their condition.

The remarks met with considerable opposition, but when the vote was taken it showed a majority of ten in favor of declaring the strike off. Those who were in favor of calling the strike off were jubilant, while those who were against it were badly put out. Most of the latter were men who were obtained, and many of them were men who had either applied for positions in the mill and had been turned down or felt sure that their names were on the company's blacklist and could not get positions.

A member of the advisory board said Sunday that he had been trying to get the strike declared off for two weeks, as he knew it was lost, and it would have been better for the men, as a great many more of them could have got their places back. Those who can not get back are in a bad fix, as the relief funds will be stopped and many hundreds of them have nothing to live on. The people in Homestead, especially the business men, are highly elated over the declaration to call the strike off, for it had continued much longer it would have ruined the town. Many business houses have fallen into the hands of the sheriff since the strike was on. Business is expected to resume its normal condition soon.

The Homestead strike has proved one of the most disastrous in the history of the country. It originated from a reduction in wages in the departments where members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel workers were employed. The hitch was on what was known as the sliding scale. It is a scale which regulates the men's wages by the price of steel billets. Nearly every mill in this vicinity signed the scale, including other mills of the Carnegie Co.

At the refusal of the firm to sign the scale for the Homestead mill a lock-out occurred of the Amalgamated association, and they were joined by the mechanics and laborers, who struck out of sympathies only, their wages not being reduced. The strikers were determined to keep non-union men out of the mill, and adopted military discipline. The story of the arrival and bloody fight with the Pinkertons on July 6, the subsequent riotous proceedings, and the calling out of the national guard, and its departure after three months' duty, is too well known to repeat.

For six months the mill has been running almost as well as before the strike, but until within the last week the strikers have steadfastly refused to admit defeat.

The news of Sunday's action was received with dismay by the strikers in the two Lawrenceville mills of Carnegie. These men were sympathetic strikers, and went out at the time the men at Beaver Falls and Duquesne struck. The Duquesne men gave up the fight in three weeks and the Beaver Falls strikers decided to go back Sunday. The Lawrenceville men, however, were steadfast and had no intention of giving in. They are now in the position of striking for no cause. They are very angry at the Homestead men, and will probably declare the strike off Monday.

The strike at one time involved nearly 10,000 men, and the loss in wages reach, it is said, in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. Then there is an immense loss to the firm, which can not be estimated, but which conservative people put at least double the amount lost by the men in wages. To this can be added nearly half a million dollars paid to the troops, and the costs to the county of Allegheny for the riot, treason and other cases growing out of the strike. At least thirty-five deaths were directly or indirectly caused by the strike.

Besides those killed in the battle of July 6 many soldiers contracted fever which resulted fatally, one soldier was shot accidentally by a comrade, another was killed by the cars, one striker committed suicide, one drowned, and one was killed by the cars, several non-union men died from fever and several were killed in the mill, and one was murdered by another non-unionist.

The attempted assassination of Chairman Frick, of the Carnegie Co., is also indirectly credited to the strike.

A MADMAN.

Kills His Father-in-Law and His Mother-in-Law.

He Also Wounds His Wife But Presumably It Was Unintentional.

The Desperate Man Surprised and Captured After Wounding an Officer, and Himself Wounded—He Narrowly Escapes Being Lynched.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Herman Siegler, a German living with his wife and three children at the residence of his wife's parents, Henry and Caroline Siles, No. 733 North Paulina street, shot his father-in-law and mother-in-law, Sunday morning, instantly killing each. His next victim was his wife, but she was only slightly wounded. Before the police were able to disarm and arrest Siegler a number of shots were exchanged and he was wounded in the right side by a bullet from a policeman's revolver. He was removed to the county hospital.

Siegler secured a shot-gun at his brother's house, on north Horne avenue, and returned to his own home. He entered by the front door, went back through the hallway, and placed the gun in a small closet in the kitchen. He took it out almost immediately and returned to the parlor, where his children were. His wife was in the rear part of the house, and the first intimation of any disturbance was when Siegler's ten-year-old son began to scream. "Papa, put down that gun," he was heard to say by Mrs. Siles, who was with her husband at the time. Mrs. Siles hurried down to the parlor and as she entered the room Siegler attempted to elevate the gun, as though he intended to shoot her. She did not hesitate a moment, but rushed up to her son-in-law, and throwing her arms about his neck, tried to take the gun away from him. "Keep away," shouted Siegler, as he pushed the aged woman aside violently.

Then placing the gun against her left breast he fired. She sank to the floor dead. Mrs. Siegler, hearing the shot, ran into the house of Mrs. Frederick Heyden, calling for assistance. As she passed through the hall-way she took her children with her. Leaving the children in Mrs. Heyden's care, Mrs. Siegler hastened back to her home, and as she entered the front door another shot was fired by her husband. It is supposed that it was intended for Mrs. Siles, but some of the shot struck Mrs. Siegler. One entered her right ear, two found lodgment in her left arm and one in her right breast. None of these wounds will result fatally.

The shots aroused Mr. Siles, and he descended into the hallway. As he stepped from the lower step to the floor Siegler met him. Raising the gun, which he had reloaded, he fired. At the same time Mr. Siles raised his right arm to shield his face. It received the full charge, as the two were within two feet of each other. It is believed that Siegler then discharged the other barrel of his gun in his father-in-law's face, for portions of his neck and right cheek were torn away.

The shooting occurred while a large congregation was leaving the Evangelical Lutheran church of Bethlehem, close by. Soon between twelve hundred and fifteen hundred people were surrounding the house, and a call was sent for the police. After the officers arrived an advance was made on the house.

Officers Donahue and Foley tried to force open the front door, which Siegler had locked when he staggered back into the house, and were greeted with a discharge from Siegler's gun. Officer Donahue's clothing was torn by the shot, and he received a slight wound in the face. After this Siegler went to the rear of the house and remained some time in the kitchen. Officer McCartney started into a residence across the alley, and was standing on the front steps, when he saw Siegler pass the dining-room window in his own house, going toward the front door. The latter, coming out, still holding his gun, and appearing dazed, started north on Paulina street. Officer McCartney slipped up behind him, seized him by the throat, and, before any resistance could be offered, wrenched the gun from his hands.

With his prisoner in custody, and with plenty of assistance from the police, Officer McCartney found it by no means an easy task to place Siegler in one of the patrol-wagons which were standing near by. He and Officer Simonson, each holding the man with a firm grasp, started toward the nearest patrol-wagon. "He will never get out of this," shouted one man, as he made an effort to strike Siegler with his fist. Threats of violence were heard on every hand, and the police saw a number of revolvers drawn by citizens, whose actions indicated that they were anxious to punish the murderer before he could be placed in the hands of the law. Repeatedly Siegler was struck by the crowd of officers that surrounded him. Siegler was at last placed in the wagon in safety, and the horses were whipped into a gallop and driven to the police station.

At the station Siegler was discovered to be crazy. He made a statement saying that the Lord commanded him to get the gun and kill his mother-in-law, as she was a witch, and added: "I shot her in the hall; I was confused, I fired at the old man and shot him. I then went out on the steps, and the patrol wagon came up. Then I was confused altogether. I have been sick and have had trouble."
