

LARGEST IN THE CITY.

Purely Business!

The columns of a newspaper represent a cash value. No publisher can afford to give advertising "notices" free any more than a merchant can...

The Continued Calls

UPON THE LEDGER for free notices have become so burdensome that we are forced to publish the following terms:

For Notices of Suppers, excursions, fairs, or other public entertainments where a fee is charged, and for ordinary notices, resolutions of respect, &c., THE LEDGER will charge FIVE CENTS A LINE, and hereafter this will be the invariable rule. This, however.

Does Not Include

notices of Lodge meetings or Church services, which must not exceed ten lines.

Avoidance of Disputes.

Misunderstandings are unpleasant. The rate for Business Leads in THE LEDGER is 10 cents a line for the first insertion and 5 cents a line for subsequent insertions. A customer orders a five-line local inserted in the paper. "I'll tell you when to take it out," he says to the bookkeeper. But he forgets all about it. The notice runs for two months—32 times—the bill is $112.50. When he finds it out there is a "kick" and a controversy, followed probably by an icy feeling. Now, to obviate this trouble, no "bill forward" notices will be accepted hereafter. Let's have a definite agreement at the outset and the termination will be pleasant all around.

All matter for publication must be handed in before 9 o'clock in the morning of each day.

If you have friends visiting you, or if you are going away on a visit, please drop us a note to that effect.

My own attire's banished, mommer, My bloomers bind the knee, My skirts are disappearing fast, And you can't feel for me. I had a dreadful dream, mommer, 'Twas of my bike at sea; I saw a form amidst a storm, I heard myself called "he;" I heard myself called "he," mommer, As plain as now I speak, I thought my brain would burst, mommer, I thought my heart would break! TOOK HIS OWN LIFE.

A FORMER FLEMING COUNTY SUICIDES AT KNOXVILLE.

Louis Kossuth Burns, Prominent Clothing Merchant and Capitalist, Shoots Himself—Well Known in Maysville.

The following personal letter will explain itself:

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Oct. 14th, 1895. Thomas A. Davis, Esq.—Dear Sir: I send you by this mail a copy of Saturday's Sentinel containing an account of the suicide of L. K. Burns, which I thought might possibly interest you as he was from Fleming county. Shortly after we came here he came in, and, after introducing himself, made inquiries of his old friends. He asked of Frank Ranson, Horace January and a large number of boys of that time with whom he went to school, his father owning Bell Grove Springs and having sent him to school in Maysville, to H. R. Blaisdell I think.

Of course none of us had known him at that time, but he would frequently after that come in and chat of old times.

One day Early Stockwell came in and I took him around to see Mr. Burns and they swapped yarns all day. A singular coincidence, too, is that that was last January and Early S. has not been in Knoxville since till today.

Mr. Burns, as I understand it, made quite a lot of money in the boom here, being rated at one time a half million, but was pinched when the boom busted, and I suppose never recovered, as he told me about a week ago that he was hard pressed. Yours, &c., ALBERT GREENWOOD.

Below is the account contained in Saturday's Sentinel to which Mr. Greenwood has referred:

Louis Kossuth Burns, the Gay street clothier and real estate dealer, took his life with his own hand this morning at 6:15 o'clock. The deed was done at his home, 915 East Main street, where the deceased had resided several years. Business troubles, the death of his brother, and temporary insanity are assigned as the cause. For the last week the family have been noticing a change in his condition and were very attentive to him and did not hesitate to have everything about his residence to please him. For the last two days his condition has become worse and a constant watch was kept over him. He was not able to attend to business and remained at home the most of the time. He went to bed at the usual hour last night and rose this morning at 4:30 o'clock, his accustomed time. He dressed and later went to the bathroom and remained a short time. He then returned to the bedroom and kissed his baby and seemed better than usual and inquired of his wife and a servant how they were. He ate breakfast and seemed in a better humor than usual. At 6 o'clock he went into the bedroom of his nephew, Thomas E. Burns, which was then vacant, and took an old army pistol of 44-caliber, sat down on the bedside, placed the weapon against his right temple and fired. The ball passed through the brain and came out on the left side of his head, just above the ear, hit the headboard of the bedstead, then glanced to the opposite wall, back again to the wall over the bed, and fell on the bed from the wall. The first persons to reach him were his nephew, Thomas E. Burns, and his wife. He was lying on the bed breathing his last and in his right hand was the weapon which had been the means of ending his existence. The alarm was given and in a few minutes the neighbors had arrived and all was done possible to relieve the sufferings of the family, which was thrown into extreme grief. Dr. Bayless was summoned, but of course could do nothing.

Coroner Rus Johnson also soon arrived, but said an inquest was not necessary, as how he came to his death was well known. The remains were taken in charge by an undertaker.

The deceased was one of the best known citizens of Knoxville, and a more thorough business man was not to be found. He was a great trader and since in Knoxville has owned and exchanged considerable property. He came to Knoxville in the fall of 1888 and purchased a large quantity of real estate and also several store buildings on Gay street. Besides this he and Dr. Bayless erected the Vendome Hotel.

When the panic came a year or two afterward the income from his property was small and this was a great disappointment to him. Aside from this he was an agent for some insurance companies in the North and he was interested in the Knoxville Brick Company and was a partner with T. E. Burns in the grocery store on East Main street and a controlling partner in the clothing firm of L. K. Burns & Co., on Gay street. To add to his troubles, his brother, C. H. Burns, visited him last summer a year ago, and September 30th, a year ago, died and was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery. This preyed upon his mind and a few days ago he was found in a melancholy condition bending over his brother's grave at Woodlawn and another time was found wandering about the cemetery in a dazed condition.

Since his illness of the last few days began he has talked continually about

George W. Adair, the attorney of this city, was at Cleveland, O., last week in the interest of the Cases of this county, relative to the big fortune to which they are asserting their claim.

Too Modest by Half. To be mathematically precise W. S. Cleveland is exactly too modest by half. He announces a double show, when he has a quadruple one by his own statement. The combination of his massive minstrels consist of first, a white minstrel show; second, a troupe of genuine black minstrels, "blacked up by Nature" with a color warranted not to wash off; third, a Japanese troupe; fourth, a tribe of Arabs. There you are—four shows—and we reiterate, Cleveland is too modest by half, and has under his management four full-sized complete shows instead of two, and when they come to town, heralded by two brass bands and a fife and drum corps, they make the people open their eyes and pocket-books. Cleveland's success is partly accounted for by his constantly keeping in touch with capital. Give the public what they want and they'll do the rest. At the Opera house tonight.

The Mount Lebanon Shakers recently performed a great deed of charity, although it was not designed as a charity, being nothing more or less than an advertising scheme. It however resulted in great good just the same. They gave away 1,000 bottles of their Digestive Cordial to those suffering from stomach derangements.

It was so effective in curing those who used the remedy that they were loud in their praises of it and in consequence a large demand for the cordial was at once created. The druggists of this town have little books that tell all about it. Digestive Cordial creates an appetite, aids digestion and brings about a rapid increase in flesh and strength. Laxol is the name of a palatable Castor Oil. Just the thing for children.
