WHY SHE RIDES A WHEEL.
Why does a woman ride a wheel?
Is often asked by folks;
The henpecked man says 'tis 'cause
There are so many spokes.
—Exchange.

There is still a better reason
Why a girl is fond of bikes,
It is not so much the spokes
As the fellows that she likes.
—Argonaut.

How many other wittings
With these two have conspired
To make the bicyclic girl
Pneumatically tired?
—Lexington Leader.

And now the Leader's "wittling,"
Just at the proper juncture,
Draws down upon this little joke
And kills it with a pun-cture.
—Danville Advocate.

A woman rides that blooming wheel
Because, like spring—ah, well,
She can always have her bloomers out
And ring that chestnut bell.

There isn't anything else which money can be put into that furnishes as good an investment as a fine diamond. To be sure it brings no income, but the enjoyment of its beauty. In a pin or ring, in an eardrop or stud it is in use all the time, but it doesn't deteriorate in value, and can be turned into money any time. Balenger the Jeweller has them in all sizes in a variety of settings.

In a case before the Court of Appeals Judge Eastin decided that a barn located 300 yards from the dwelling house of the owner in a different inclosure and used principally for the purpose of storing tobacco is not an "outhouse belonging to or used with a dwelling-house" within the meaning of Section 1.163 of the Kentucky Statutes, which prescribes a punishment for feloniously breaking into such an "outhouse," but is a "warehouse," within the meaning of Section 1.164 of the Kentucky Statutes.

The Epworth Herald.
This one has point. It comes to us from—we don't know where. But it will awaken a sympathetic chord in the hearts of newspaper men whose eyes happen to fall on this page:
A Minister wished to ascertain what influence the hard times had upon his congregation, and said at the close of his sermon:
"I would ask everyone who still is able to pay his debts to rise from his seat."
The whole congregation arose with the exception of one man. The Parson then asked that all those who were unable to meet their bills should rise. The Minister regarded him attentively yet kindly.
"How is it, my friend," he said, "that you are the only one among all these people who cannot pay his debts?"
"Sir," replied the man hesitatingly, "I publish a newspaper, and these, my brothers, who arose just now, are all subscribers, and—
But the Minister interrupted him hastily—"Let us pray."
